Roosevelt's Own Story Starts in Wednesday's American

President Roosevelt's own story of the New Deal begins tomorrow in the Boston Evening American.

It is a history-making, precedent-shattering review of his own acts while still in the White House.

The writings are absolutely new to publication. They have never before appeared in print—in any magazine or elsewhere.

And the President's five volumes containing them will not be issued until after the conclusion of this series in the American.

The first article, appearing tomorrow, concerns the genesis of the New Deal. The President will disclose how these broad principles and objectives took form while he was governor of New York.

On Thursday the President will tell his own story of his famous meetings with President Hoover in the interval between Mr. Roosevelt's election, in November, 1932, and his inauguration on the following March fourth.

The article frankly relates what he and President Hoover discussed, explains wherein they differed as to the most effective remedies for ending the depression, and gives the reason why the President-elect declined to join President Hoover in taking certain momentous steps.

The dramatic incident of the Bank Holiday will be the subject of the President's third article.

What prompted him to declare the holiday, what means he employed to do it, and his four reasons for the act, will be included in this Presidential commentary.

The fourth article will bring a review by the President of the problem of unemployment relief, as it was upon his entrance into the White House.

He will detail the action his Administration took to cope with the desperate situation of the jobless and present a summary of the results to date.

The precedent of the President's publishing, during his term of office, a series of books containing documents and notes concerning his own Administration, is but one of many that he has set in the course of his public career.

The making of precedents has almost become a custom with him.

This began even before he was elected President.

While still governor of New York, he inaugurated the frequent use of the radio to convey a message directly to the people.

He has continued this since entering the White House with his "Fireside Chats."

A second pre-election precedent was his accepting his party's nomination for the Presidency in person at the party convention.

The most interesting of Mr. Roosevelt's comments which the Boston Evening American tomorrow publishes have to do with the story BEHIND THE NEW DEAL.

He covers completely the whole exciting time—the Hundred Days of his first Congress, when so much was done to meet the 1933 crisis.

With each of his 30 articles are photographic illustrations of scenes or of people concerned in the subject of the day.

Smiles Show Joy on Bridal Day

Boxer Al McCoy, of French-Irish descent, and a pretty Jamaica Plain girl whose parents were born in Germany, filed marriage intentions at City Hall, secured a waiver and set themselves today to wed.

No one at City Hall connected the rugged lad who filed under the name Floyd A. Le Brasseur with Al McCoy, the ringster, but the former is the correct name of the heavyweight boxer.

The girl is Miss Gertrude E. Buchwald, 19, of 217 Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain, daughter of Otto Buchwald, business agent of the Brewery Workers Union.

Yesterday the couple filed marriage intentions. Judge Frank W. Tomasello of municipal court granted them a waiver of the five-day law.

Through this they secured their marriage license, but they waited until today for the nuptials.

Following the wedding scheduled for today, the boxer and his bride will go to New York, from where they will sail Thursday on a 12-day cruise to Bermuda. They will live in New York.

McCoy has been in Manhattan training for his fight next month with Gunner Barlund.

For each it is a first marriage. In the intentions, McCoy gave his age as 24, his birthplace as Waterville, Me., his present address, 792 Beacon street, Boston, and his parents as Mathias Le Brasseur, native of Canada, and Clara McCoy, Le Brasseur, native of Maine.

M'GRATH NAMED NEW COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

Hotels, Clubs Hit by Mud In Water

Downtown hotels, office buildings, clubs and restaurants flooded the city water department with complaints today when their water supply suddenly turned muddy and the pressure became visibly reduced.

The water department explained the trouble is due to construction work on the Huntington avenue subway.

Water for downtown Boston comes from Chestnut Hill reservoir through a 48-inch high-pressure main under Huntington avenue.

It has become necessary to cut this main, it was explained. A new "loop" is being laid to detour the subway construction, and will be ready in about three weeks.

HITS POLICE RADIO

Water for downtown Boston, meanwhile, is flowing through smaller pipes, which accounts for the low pressure. The muddiness, it was said, probably will have cleared up by tomorrow.

One effect of the sudden let-down in pressure was an emergency at police headquarters, where the valves in the police radio station are water-cooled.

Fearing the trickle of water remaining would not be sufficient to protect the tubes, police radio engineers tapped the fire department's main, and also organized a "bucket brigade" to keep the radio working.

Postoffice employes had no coffee at lunch time, the water in the employes' restaurant being so muddy it was unfit for use.

The Hotel Statler reported "no trouble at all" on its top floor. Downtown restaurants at noon were unable to serve water to their customers because of its muddiness, one restaurant proprietor describing it as having "the color of rye whiskey."

SEES NO FIRE PERIL

Janitors of several large buildings complained that the lack of pressure was endangering the efficiency of fire sprinkling systems on upper floors, but Daniel M. Sullivan, fire engineer in charge for the water department, pointed out that most larger buildings have their own emergency pumps.

"There is no danger of a failure of street fire hydrants," Sullivan added. "There is plenty of water in the mains, even though the pressure is low. Boston's modern fire apparatus is equipped to do its own pumping and is not dependent upon the pressure in the hydrants."

Several local distilleries in affected areas reported they were being forced to close down because of the muddiness of the water.

Girl Clerks Win Prizes In Sweeps

DUBLIN, March 22—More gold was tossed across the Atlantic ocean into the pockets of lucky Americans today as the drums of fortune revolved in the round room of the Dublin mayoral residence to complete the 23d Irish Hospitals sweepstakes draw.

American ticket-holders are certain to net at least $2,058,345 from the draw.

House prizes totalled $1,609,335, residuals, $33,810 and consolation prizes $415,000. Winning tickets held in the United States, however, will greatly increase the total American proceeds from the sweepstake.

Twenty-nine residual cash prizes—each worth $1152—were drawn by Americans, 19 of them residents of the New York-New Jersey area. There were 50 residual prizes in all.

In addition, 262 of the first 500 consolation prizes went to ticket holders in the United States. Each cash consolation prize is worth $500 and a total of 830 such awards went to Americans.

GOOD LUCK TRADITION

Yesterday, Americans kept up their traditional reputation for good luck by drawing a total of 51 tickets on the first five favorites in the sweepstakes, which is based on the Grand National steeplechase to be run at Aintree, England, March 25.

Jews Ask Powers Halt Nazi Pogrom

Catholics, Jews and Protestants united in Boston in a warning that Fiscism and Communism peril this country, and the World Jewish Council appealed to the League of Nations to stop Hitler's persecutions in Austria.

World Move Against Nazis

GENEVA, Switzerland, March 22—Charging that Nazis' treatment of Austrian Jews violates international law, the World Jewish Congress today mapped concerted efforts to have the British, French and American governments make representations to Germany.

The congress, asserting that its information was from unimpeachable sources, declared that more than 1700 Viennese Jews have committed suicide since Austria was taken over by Adolf Hitler.

Mounting pressure against "non-Aryans" was further reflected in the report that 800,000 Jews and part Jews in Austria confront intensification of the restrictions placed upon them as soon as the April 10 plebiscite has been held.

Although only 260,000 Austrian men, women and children are registered as Jews, the country's "non-Aryans" total at least 800,000. The Nazi Nuremberg racial laws apply to persons having so much as one-fourth Jewish blood in their veins.

The world Jewish Congress said the Nuremberg laws have been in effect in Austria for the eight days since Hitler seized that country. It further alleged that virtually all Jewish institutions, except the hospital, have been closed in Vienna.

Reports from various sources revealed that suicides among Jews, as well as among Socialists and other anti-Nazis, are reaching epidemic proportions in Austria.

Austrian Nazi prisons and concentration camps are crowded by Jews and anti-Nazis numbering between 10,000 and 12,000.

Thousands of Jews are huddling in Vienna cellars or have taken refuge in the homes of non-Jewish friends. The anti-Jewish boycott, as well as plundering, have ruined many business enterprises, according to reports.

Landing on One Wheel Saves 5

Boston Pilot's Skill Aided by Radio Tip

MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y., March 22 (AP)—Five persons escaped death or serious injury today because of the skill of Charles Cowan, Boston transport pilot.

With his four passengers, Cowan circled Roosevelt Field at noon and was about to land his twin-motored plane after arriving from Boston. George McCauley, radio man at the field, noticed one wheel of the retractable landing gear had failed to drop.

He radioed Cowan, advising him of make a "skid" landing on the grass at nearby Mitchell Field.

With two ambulances and two fire trucks lined up on the runway, adjoining the grass field, Cowan brought the plane down on one wheel.

The craft sped smoothly for 2000 feet, then scraped along for 100 feet, demolishing both propellers and ripping out the bottom of the fuselage and the landing-gear, before stopping.

Just last at their escape the passengers were S. L. Bickford, New York restaurant owner; Dr. Clayton Gunderson, of New York; Edward Humphrey, of Boston, and Adriel Bird, of Rockland, Me.

Take Workers Off the Dole, Members of Congress Urge

Hearst Poll Shows Members United In Thought

What are most important moves necessary in a fight for economic recovery in the United States? Here is another article in a vital series in which leaders of the nation give their views in response to a questionnaire by the Hearst newspapers.

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
Special to the Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, March 22—"Take American workers off the dole—that is the American way."

That typical expression of congressional opinion represents the majority composite mind of Senate and House of Representatives today.

This is clearly shown in the survey of this opinion conducted by the Hearst newspapers, in an effort to ascertain what the Senators and Congressmen are thinking about on the broad subject of national economic recovery.

The replies disclosing this appreciation of a grave problem were in response to the second of the questions prepared by Mr. William R. Hearst, and submitted to the whole membership of Congress. This question reads:

No. 2. "Do you think industry should be encouraged to expand and take American workers off the charity lists of the dole?"

It was Mr. Edward J. Hart, Democratic member of the House of Representatives from New Jersey, who gave this "keynote" as quoted in the opening sentence.

In the Senate 83 per cent of the replies to this question were in the affirmative.

ONLY TWO DISAGREE

One Senator replied affirmatively with rather complicated qualifications, and there were several Senators who remained non-committal.

In the House of Representatives, however, although returns are still continuing to come in, of those thus far received, only two of the answers reflect a view that industry itself is somehow responsible for the dole.

With these exceptions, all the replies from members of the House of Representatives express the conviction that the time has come to encourage industry to stand on its own through plant expansion and rehabilitation employment can be increased and wages substituted for government doles.

Some of the responses attempt to go into the question of methods, but most of the members content themselves with rather vigorous variations of the words "Yes." Here are some of the more elaborate answers:

Senator Rush D. Holt, Democrat, West Virginia:

"Over a hundred years ago Thomas Jefferson exposed the real heart of this whole problem of excessive taxation which burdens us today. Speaking of government, he said:

"I place economy among the first and most important virtues.

SENATOR W. H. KING

and public debt as the greatest of dangers to be feared. To preserve our independence, WE MUST NOT LET OUR RULERS LOAD US WITH PERPETUAL DEBT. We must make our choice between ECONOMY AND LIBERTY, OR PROFUSION AND SERVITUDE.

"If we run into such debt, we must be taxed in our meat and drink, in our necessities and in our comforts, in our labors and in our amusements.

"If we can prevent the government from wasting the labors of the people UNDER THE PRETENSE OF CARING FOR THEM, they, the people, will be happy. The same prudence which in private life would forbid our paying our money for unexplained projects, forbids it in the disposition of public monies.

"We are endeavoring to reduce the government to the practice of a rigid economy to avoid burdening the people and ARMING THE MAGISTRATE WITH A PATRONAGE OF MONEY WHICH MIGHT BE USED TO CORRUPT THE PRINCIPLES OF OUR GOVERNMENT."

"This shows how Thomas Jefferson would stand today on the question of the dole. I stand with him. If ever a depression was government-made, this is it. Industry is being shot by shotguns in the hands of novices, like a small boy with a new airgun, shooting at everything in sight."

SURE, SAYS KING

Senator King, Democrat of Utah, member of the Senate finance committee, answered this question with a succinct, "Sure!" His Democratic colleague, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, replied:

"Yes, in general. Individual industrial organizations should not be encouraged to expand beyond a consistent estimate of future growth."

Republican Senator Davis, of Pennsylvania, answered this way:

"Industry should be encouraged to put more into wages in substandard fields and to increase prices and wages slowly over a long period of time. We have been moving too hastily and uncertainly the last five years."

Senator Edwin C. Johnson, Democrat of Colorado, said:

"Yes, indeed, and until there is no unemployment!"

Senator Robert R. Reynolds, Democrat of North Carolina, said:

"Most certainly—and you can encourage industry by repealing the undistributed profits tax."

It is interesting to note that several other senators used the same argument in their summary of the whole set of 12 questions, as contained in question No. 12. Senator Bridges, Republican of New Hampshire, replied to No. 2 as follows:

JOBS HELP NATION

"Industry should certainly be encouraged to take American workers not only off the charity lists and the dole but also from the so-called emergency projects, such as WPA, of the New Deal administration. Jobs created in industry open the road for individual initiative which is the aggregate result in greater morale and greater progress in science and industry. The philosophy supporting the tenet that 'the world owes me a living' has never created anything of lasting value."

All the other Senators participating in the questionnaire replied "yes" to question No. 2.

Let us now turn to the House, and observe how the members of that body, in which originate all appropriation bills for the dole, have reacted to Mr. Hearst's second question. Here are some of the answers in full, not counting the "yes" replies, which will be analyzed in the concluding summary to be published next Sunday:

Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart, Republican of California:

"By all means, yes, industry should be encouraged to expand so that American workmen may be taken off the dole."

Representative Chauncey W. Reed, Republican, of Illinois:

"Yes, but industry cannot be encouraged to expand until assured that the government contemplates no radical economic policy."

EXPANSION NEEDED

Representative Charles G. Binderup, Democrat, Nebraska, said:

"Certainly. I think industry should expand and I think it will when our people are supplied with a purchasing power to consume the products of industry. We have potential power to supply a much larger production than our people have purchasing power to consume."

Representative James M. Head, Democrat, of New York, failed to reflect the overwhelming majority sentiment in the House replies. He said:

"Industry was encouraged in 1928, '29, and again in 1933, '34, and '35, and failed to score."

William M. Sutphin (D.) of New Jersey, stated it this way:

"This should not be the objective, but the automatic beneficial result of industrial activity. All we need to do is create the proper economic climate, and this desired fruit will grow naturally."

Representative Harold Knutson (R.) of Minnesota:

"Industry should be given every encouragement."

"By all means," replied Representative George A. Dondero (R.) of Michigan.

Representative Martin F. Smith (D.) of Washington replied:

"By all means—by federal grants and loans if necessary."

Representative Joseph W. Martin (R.) of Massachusetts:

"You know that is the only way out of the depression."

Representative William Lemke, Republican of North Dakota, independent candidate for president in 1936:

"I believe industry is patriotic enough and honest enough to expand wherever it can do so safely and consistently without being encouraged. The trouble is that there is under-consumption."

"I certainly do," replied Representative W. M. Mason, Republican, of Illinois. Representative Clyde H. Smith, Republican, of Maine, said:

"Yes, of course industry should be encouraged by the way of omitting new taxation and preventing the importation of foreign goods. This would relieve direct the overwhelming majority sentiment in the House replies. He said:

"Of course industry should be encouraged. Of course we should put men on the job and off the dole. I know a firm that illustrates the point. It has abandoned a million-dollar plan of replacement and expansion because it would have to pay the government $300,000 by way of taxes for the privilege of spending the million. If that firm had been encouraged, instead of handicapped, it would have expanded its plant, hired more men—and thus reduced the dole."

On the whole the state of mind in Congress as to question No. 2 is so nearly unanimous that it is only natural so many members of Senate and House should have replied to it with a simple:

"Yes."

(Another article in this series will be published tomorrow.)

Questions for Members Of Congress to Answer

THE following are the 12 vital questions affecting the economic recovery of the United States, submitted to the members of the Senate and House of Representatives by the Hearst newspapers, for their analysis and opinions:

1—As a factor in dispelling depression, how do you value American industry and its capital to employ labor and produce national wealth?

2—Do you think industry should be encouraged to expand and take American workers off the charity list of the dole?

3—Do you think American industry in over-burdened with taxation?

4—Do you think American industry can pay high taxes and also pay higher wages and also produce at low prices to compete with foreign products?

5—Do you believe in tariff protection of American industry and labor?

6—Do you believe in free trade?

7—Do you think that reciprocal tariff concessions entered into with one nation should be automatically extended to practically all nations under most favored nations principle?

8—Will that policy eventually result in opening American markets to practically all foreign products?

9—Do you think American markets should be mainly preserved for American industry and the American wages of industry?

10—How do you account for the continual decline in American exports and the continual increase in American imports?

11—Do you think that closed factories and jobless workers are all connected with the invasion of American markets by cheap foreign products?

12—How can we change depression or recession into prosperity?

TVA Ouster Seen Heading for High Court

Roosevelt Will Make a Decision on Morgan This Afternoon

WASHINGTON, March 22 (INS)—The courts—ultimately the Supreme Court—will be called upon to rule on President Roosevelt's right to remove Dr. Arthur E. Morgan as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, scheduled for formal announcement at 2:30 this afternoon.

Chairman Morgan, who "does not choose to run away" from a fight, even though it be with the President of the United States, was back in his Yellow Springs, O., home today prepared to contest in every legal way the President's power to oust him.

The President accuses Morgan of insubordination, obstruction of a federal agency's functions and failure to substantiate "grave charges of dishonesty and want of integrity" he made against his two TVA board associates.

Thus, the long-simmering row that has split the TVA wide open approached a boiling point. Prompt repercussions on Capitol Hill were certain.

A debate was in progress in the House this afternoon that promised to produce oral fireworks unless leaders slip on the gag.

The Senate was preparing an independent investigation of the long battle between Chairman Morgan and his colleagues, David Lilienthal and Dr. Harcourt Morgan.

Before leaving the city, Chairman Morgan openly defied the President to oust him or make him resign.

The forcible ouster of Chairman Morgan, if carried out, will be the most drastic disciplinary measure taken against a high administration official since President Roosevelt entered the White House.

He struck at her when she resisted his attempts to grab her handbag. When she was knocked to the ground he snatched the bag and ran into the park.

Trade Pact Attacked by Textile Man

Fears Import Flood By Tariff Cut on Cotton Goods

WASHINGTON, March 22 (AP)—W. Ray Bell, president of the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York, said today any reduction of tariffs on cotton goods would open the flood gates of imports."

"It would seem advisable to raise the rates rather than lower them, to compensate for the efforts being made in this country to extend employment and raise the rates of pay," he told the committee for reciprocity information.

Testifying on the effect of possible duty reductions in the proposed Anglo-American trade pact, Bell said distributors of cotton goods believe "present tariffs afford a minimum of protection," and that "further" sharing of American markets should be distributed among other industries than textiles.

IMPORTS TO JAPAN

Present tariffs, he continued, were intended "to equalize our cost of production with that of the United Kingdom, but they were based on average wage levels of less than 32 cents an hour, effective in 1930. The current rate is about 43½ cents an hour."

Despite increased imports in cotton cloth from Japan, he added, our exports of raw cotton to Japan have steadily dwindled."

R. I. MAY TESTIFIES

Lawrence Richmond, of West Warwick, R. I., representing 16 Rhode Island cotton mills in the South and New England, was the first witness representing the textile industry to propose a possible concession in duties.

He suggested "a moderate reduction in the present duty of 32 inch-wide corduroy would not be harmful."

He pleaded, however, against any reductions on velveteens, declaring more of this type of goods had been imported between 1926 and 1930 than domestic manufacturers had sold.

Deal Beats Off Moves to Shift Dictator Bill

3 Amendments Are Beaten During Voting In Senate

WASHINGTON, March 22 (AP)—Administration supporters beat off three efforts to restrict the government reorganization bill today, although opponents of the measure mustered unavailing tie votes on two of them.

The senate rejected, 50 to 33, a proposal by Senator Pittman (D.) of Nevada to exempt the Forest Service from provisions of the bill giving the President broad powers to reshuffle federal agencies.

Senator Clark (D.) of Missouri then offered an amendment which would have prevented the President from making any changes in the present set-up of the Veterans Bureau. When this was defeated by a tie vote, 41 to 41, Clark rephrased the amendment and offered it again.

This time the vote was 38 to 38 and the second amendment was lost.

One administration supporter, Senator Hatch (D.) of New Mexico, joined opposition for the first time in advocating the Pittman amendment, but announced he would oppose further exemptions.

Senator Clark (D.) of Missouri immediately offered an amendment to exempt the Veterans Bureau from terms of the bill.

SEAGREEN'S WIRE

Senator Johnson (R.) of California, supporting Pittman's proposal, read into the record a telegram from President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, urging that the bill be sent back to committee for further hearings.

Green's proposal would probably mean shelving of the bill for this session.

Interior Secretary Ickes, who has been interested in having the Forest Service transferred from the Agriculture Department to the Interior, expressed gratification upon hearing of the defeat of the Pittman amendment.

ICKES BACKS BILL

"I have been for the President's reorganization bill from the beginning, regardless of any effect on this department," Ickes said. "I was for it as a matter of principle in which I believe, and nobody from the Interior Department has been lobbying against the bill."

Senator Byrnes (D.) of South Carolina, floor manager of the bill, said that if the Forest Service exemption and other similar amendments were voted, Congress would be placed in the position of saying:

"Mr. President, reorganize the government, but don't touch anything in the government."

Senator Burke (D.) of Nebraska, said there was "tremendous interest in certain quarters" that the Forest Service be transferred. He urged that such transfer be prevented.

Tavern's 90-Foot Shift Opposed

About 300 Roxbury housewives, a Catholic priest and an Episcopal rector opposed the 900-foot transfer of the location of a liquor license today in a hearing before the Boston Licensing Board.

Joseph F. Molden, the applicant, asked to move his tavern from 892 Dudley street, Roxbury, to 353 Dudley street across the street from a theater.

Strenuously opposed to the move was the Rev. Michael J. Norton, of St. Paul's Church, Roxbury.

Father Norton charged that "unsavory persons" patronized the tavern and pointed out that a long line of children waited outside the theater on Saturday afternoons.

Supporting him was George J. Baumister, of St. Ann's Episcopal Church, who said the proposed new site of the tavern would be seen from the front door of his church on West Cottage street.

Pleas Near End In Curley Case

Final arguments on the petition to reopen the case in which former Governor Curley and Dr. Joseph Santosuosso were ordered to return approximately $62,000 to the city were expected to end today.

Yesterday's session was given over to arguments by Edward F. McGlennon, counsel for the city, who declared the evidence presented by Curley's and Santosuosso's counsel for a reopening was "invented," not new.

The defendants were found by Judge Frederick W. Postlet to have accepted money for settlement of a damage suit against the city.

Man Faces U. S. Court in Alien Girl Case

Ex-Mill Boss Accused Of Maintaining Her In Boston Hotel

Charged with bringing a 19-year-old girl illegally into the United States from St. John, N. B., and with having maintained her in a downtown Boston hotel, Herbert C. Gates, former Lowell mill superintendent, was arraigned before Federal Judge Hugh D. McLellan here today.

The girl, federal authorities said, is Miss Frances Finlay McCullough, Brighton high school graduate, whom Federal Judge George C. Sweeney sent to jail for contempt some weeks ago when she refused to tell how she got into the United States.

DECISION AWAITED

She is being held by Immigration authorities awaiting a decision from Washington as to whether she is to be deported.

Assistant United States Attorney Edward O. Gourdon told Judge McLellan today that Gates originally brought "the girl" into the United States in 1933, and placed her in school here. Later, Gourdon said, the girl returned to New Brunswick.

Some time after this, Gourdon charged, Gates sought to obtain a permit for her re-entry into this country. The permit, Gourdon said, was refused. The girl, he charged, then entered the country illegally.

PLEADS GUILTY

Government investigators, Gourdon stated to the court, found the girl established in a downtown Boston hotel, and that Gates was "contributing financially to her support."

Gates pleaded guilty to the technical charge upon which he was indicted by the federal grand jury some time ago—that of "harboring" a person in this country illegally. Gourdon told the court the government "recommended" a fine of $100.

Judge McLellan called for the statutes expressing doubt as to the propriety of the charge, and continued the case until later in the day. Gates is represented by Attorney William H. Lewis.

Garbo Trip Stirs New Wedding Talk

Actress and Stokowski Quit Villa for Visit To Sicily

ROME, March 22 (INS)—The unheralded departure of Greta Garbo and Leopold Stokowski from their picturesque vacation villa at Ravello reawakened romantic rumors that the famed couple may soon be married under soft Sicilian skies.

Today—several hours after the movie star and the orchestra conductor left Ravello as secretly as they came to it early this month—it was learned that they were heading southwestward across the blue Straits of Messina to the seaside village of Taormina, Sicily.

WEDDING SCENE?

Taormina, situated placidly under the shadow of the ever-smoking volcano, Mount Etna, was the locale mentioned in reports of an impending Stokowski-Garbo wedding.

The Rome office of the company to which Garbo is under contract had announced that she and Stokowski were to be married at Taormina.

The London Daily Telegraph in a Rome dispatch said the nuptials would be held in the Sicilian town some time this week.

MARRIAGE DENIED

Subsequently, however, Garbo called newspaper reporters to the Tavello villa where she invested she was not yet ready to take marriage vows and described Stokowski as her guide in a search for the "beauties of life."

When the couple quietly departed Ravello, accompanied by Garbo's woman chaperone, the impression was at first given out that they were bound for Paris.

It was only after they were well along on their journey that it was discovered that Taormina, not Paris, was their destination.

And, moreover, the romantically-minded sought significance in the fact that Garbo and Stokowski chose the first day of spring in which to head for Sicily's rugged shores.

Radio to Pay Dietrich Top 'Air' Salary

Report Star May Get $5000 Week; Not Done With Films

HOLLYWOOD, March 22 (INS)—In the next few days, Marlene Dietrich will sign a radio contract for one of the biggest salaries ever paid a Hollywood star on the air.

Instead of being through in pictures as the gossips rumored, the German blonde is being sought by three producers.

Neither Miss Dietrich nor her agent would disclose her salary, but it is to be more than $5000 a week.

"What I want," she said, "is an exotic, romantic role. When I get it, I'll make another picture."

Safety Campaign Vital, Hurley Tells 700

Conference Asked To Fight Accidents As 'Disease'

Likening automobile accidents to disease, Governor Hurley declared today that "we ought to fight highway accidents as the medical profession is fighting the menace of cancer and tuberculosis.

The governor spoke on his highway safety campaign before 700 delegates to the 17th annual Massachusetts Safety Conference at Hotel Statler.

He said a widespread campaign of safety instruction is vital to reduce auto injuries and fatalities each year.

SAFE SPEED DECIDED

He added:

"There should now be counted tens of thousands of motorists who have become convinced that 40 miles an hour is the maxium safe speed for driving at night, and tens of thousands of pedestrians who have accepted the theory that the only sure safety in crossing a highway is to do so after oncoming cars have passed, and not when they are approaching."

Governor Hurley asserted also that the public would aid a safety campaign if the police made clear that there is danger in violation of traffic laws or in careless or negligent driving.

He presented awards to officials of five communities selected by the Safety Council for outstanding records in reducing highway accidents and injuries. They were Worcester for cities with more than 100,000 population; Brockton for those with populations between 50,000 and 100,000; Taunton, 25,000 to 50,000; Winthrop, 10,000 to 25,000, and Mansfield, 5000 to 10,000.

FATALITIES DECREASE

Previously, Norman Damon, director of the Automotive Safety Foundation, had told the delegates that nation-wide highway fatalities had decreased by 10 per cent during last November and December and 17 per cent in January.

Damon declared that federal highway planning surveys, better driving standards and a widespread educational campaign were contributing factors.

At the luncheon meeting, State Education Commissioner James G. Reardon made a strong appeal for the protection of children. He declared in the past 14 years, 153,000 Massachusetts children have been injured in crashes and 2500 killed.

A reduction was effected in fatalities last year, he said. The commissioner's address followed presentation of a blue ribbon to eight children, who depicted various injuries received in an auto accident.

Mother Wins in Death Race to See R. I. Nurse

A mother's race with death, a portion of which led through Boston streets, ended at Newport, R. I., today—in time.

Mud splattered, the car in which the mother, Mrs. William Richards of Antigonish, Nova Scotia, made the trip from Boston to the Rhode Island city, drew up before Newport Hospital at 8:50 a. m.

In the hospital, dying, is pretty 25-year-old Miss Lillian Richards, one of the hospital's own nurses—dying, hospital authorities say, because she was true to her nurse's code. "Make your patient comfortable."

Miss Richards, hospital authorities explained, was in charge of a patient who was being taken to the hospital in an ambulance. The patient begged for "more air." Miss Richards sought to open a window of the ambulance. Instead, she tripped the door lock. The ambulance swerved or hit a bump, and she was thrown into the street.

Word of the accident was flashed to Miss Richards parents in Nova Scotia. Mr. Richards was unable to come, but Mrs. Richards and another daughter, Emma, 27, boarded the first available train. They arrived at North Station, Boston, shortly after 6 a. m., after a 28-hour train ride.

POLICE OPEN WAY

Waiting for them at the station were friends with a car—and a Boston police escort. Traffic was waved to one side and cross-traffic was halted as Mrs. Richards and her daughter were sped through the city to the Dedham line.

At the Dedham line, they were met by an escort of Massachusetts state police, and at the Rhode Island line a similar escort of Rhode Island state troopers awaited them.

Hospital authorities at Newport held out small hope of the nurse's recovery. Everything that could be done, they said, had been done. It was believed, however, that her skull was fractured in her fall from the ambulance.

Mrs. Richards, travel worn, her face lined by grief, was taken directly to her daughter's bedside.

Death Jury Gives Mother Back to 2

Mrs. Ryan Acquitted In Killing of Her Police Husband

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

International News Service Special Correspondent

NEW YORK, March 22—Wan, girlish Mrs. Patricia Ryan, acquitted early today of the killing of her patrolman husband, Michael J. Ryan, today returned, a free but broken woman, to her two babies for whom she wept in the long, dramatic weeks of her trial.

A sigh swept over the packed courtroom as the jury of nine men and three women returned with the verdict after five hours and 34 minutes of deliberation.

A few minutes later, the 21-year-old mother half fell into a chair in an anteroom with a frenzied scream that she still loved the man she killed.

"Oh, Mike! Mike!" she cried, "I love you!"

She rose from the chair and threw herself into the arms of a matron, Mrs. Maud Curley, as a child would seek the protection of a mother.

"My babies!" she sobbed. Tears ran down her cheeks. "Take me to my babies!"

Her father, Patrick Boland, placed an arm comfortingly about her shoulders.

"There, there," he soothed. "I've come to take my baby home."

Boland then took her to their home, where she was reunited with her children, Michael, barely three, and Patricia, one.

"I'm glad you've come home from the hospital, mummy," little Michael said sleepily as she took him in her arms.

Mrs. Ryan tried to smile, but tears ran down her cheeks and over her son's face.

"I am going to send her away to the country to rest," Boland said. "She must rest until she feels quite well again. Then she will come back and devote herself to the children.

"I don't want her to work. She doesn't have to work. I want her to try to be happy."

Easier Sentence Given Barron

In an action believed unprecedented in Middlesex County, a defendant who was sentenced last Monday to State Prison was taken back into Superior Court today and received a shorter term in the House of Correction.

He is Robert W. Barron, 27, of Shawsheen street, Roxbury, former tax collector, who pleaded guilty to larceny of $32,147.14 in town funds and was sentenced to three to fiv eyears in prison.

Judge Daniel T. O'Connell resentenced Barron to two years.

Declaring that Barron had no previous record and was not represented by counsel when he entered his plea, Probation Officer Edward M. Harris told the court:

"It is true that it was a serious offense involving abuse of public confidence. I hold no brief for him or am I opposed to the length of sentence given him.

"Barron is a young man and when he finished the prison sentence it would be almost impossible for him to remove the stigma of state prison.

"In view of his youth and no previous record, I feel that a house of correction sentence would be a lesser burden on him after he finished that sentence."

Assistant District Attorney James P. O'Sullivan informed the court the district attorney's office maintained a "passive attitude" in the matter.

Police Chief Cyril Barker of Tewksbury also declared that he and the town selectmen were "agreeable" to the lighter sentence.

Tufts Students Form Anti-Cupid Union, And--

Spring is in the air and out Tufts College way the student-body, facing approaching final exams, has turned its collective thought toward anything but love.

In fact up they things safe the students have organized almost unanimously against any move "steady dating" and started a "non-steady union" which already has Dan Cupid running in circles on the campus quadrangle.

The idea started when Joseph Sweeney of Brockton, a star on the Tufts wrestling team, suggested on his college mates that it would be best for all of them to put more time into their studies than with their romances.

The idea, proved popular, from the start and the "Non Steady Union" promptly resulted.

The idea is that no student shall keep company with any one particular girl. Union members must quit their "steadies" and go out with only once-in-a-while's.

Sweeney, who is president of the organization, explained things thusly:

"On those spring nights the temptation to go out, and forget your studies, is pretty strong—too strong for the academic standing of a goo.; many fellows.

"But add to that natural feeling the extra temptation to go out that comes when you have a steady, and you are almost sure to end up in disaster.

"If the fellows in these trying spring days devoted more time to their work and less to their steadies, they'd be much better off when exams arrive."

So said Sweeney, but listen to the Jackson girls who also seem to have some ideas of their own.

For one, Miss Blanche Richmond of Boston, stormed:

"When college men go steady, they have more, not less time to study. They don't spend their time at a telephone, getting turned down on dates. Moreover, the fellow that goes steady saves money."

Helen Marquis of Leominster, another co-ed, said:

"In the first place such an institution is silly, and in the second place it isn't fair to us girls to have a club like that around the Hill."

Religious Unity Seen Nation's Hope in War on Oppression

Austria with Germany that concerns us, but the Austrians with their freedom of thought, their art, science and religion are perhaps the most delightful and cultured people on earth.

"Now we find them engulfed by a government pledged to slavery of mind, imagination and every individual achievement.

"Will this happen here? Yes, unless we find for our citizens a loyalty higher than that to the government in power. That higher loyalty comes from religion."

Analyzing the present world crisis with a keenness that recalled his fame as a scientist, Dr. Compton explained that the power of Germany and Russia is gained from pseudo-religions forced on the people. Similar power, derived from true religious loyalty regardless of creed, he described as America's need for the protection of freedom.

MUST SAVE FREEDOM

"Above all, we must save our freedom—for on this freedom our future civilization, depends," he stated. "Leadership in science, bringing economic and industrial strength, is with the free nations."

Governor Hurley joined with prominent Bay State citizens in honoring Dr. Compton, whose address was his first public statement since he succeeded the late Newton D. Baker as national chairman of the Conference.

"With all our problems, this type of meeting can best answer the attacks being made on government. Forty million citizens of Massachusetts thank you for holding it," stated Governor Hurley.

SYMPOSIUM UNDER WAY

Featuring the meeting was a demonstration by Rabbi S. Benedict Glazer of Temple Emmanuel, New York, the Rev. Thomas R. Reynolds of St. Matthew's Church, Dorchester and the Rev. Frank Jennings, secretary of the Massachusetts Council of Churches, of a symposium on religion being conducted in Massachusetts colleges under sponsorship of the state department of education.

Commissioner of Education James G. Reardon stated their work in colleges was the first of its kind in the United States to be officially sponsored by a state department of education.

HIGHLIGHTS OF SPEECHES

Highlights of addresses made by various speakers, who were presented by Judge Paul G. Kirk, include the following:

JUDGE ABRAHAM E. PINANSKI—"We are witnessing a gnawing at the very roots of civilization. The real fight is not between Fascist and Communism, both of which are subversive doctrines, but between brute strength and Godlessness on one side and representative government and religion on the other."

JUDGE JOHN E. SWIFT—"Russia, China, Mexico and Spain are bloody reminders that paganism, atheism and intolerance have never won a permanent victory."

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, former Secretary of the Navy—"The jungle law of survival of the fittest is the rule in Europe, although over there possibly it is not the fittest that survive. America needs wisdom, kindliness, justice and the mindfulness that there is still such a thing as a good neighbor."

RABBI GLAZER—"The battle lines are drawn. Today religions are not battling each other but it is a war of freedom against slavery, democracy against totalitarianism, religion against atheism."

HORROR OF EUROPE"

FR. REYNOLDS—"Our church is supra-national—above national doctrine. It makes no difference whether a government be a monarchy or a republic so long as that government protects the fundamental rights of men to life, liberty and happiness," he asserted.

"Too often we have heard, 'Hitler is right.' If that spirit is allowed to grow, the horror of Europe will be repeated here.

"Be honest, be fair, be just with your fellow man—that is the freedom which comes of great and true religion, the freedom that is American!"

In a letter to the meeting, read by Judge Kirk, Mayor Tobin stated:

"The hope of world security lies in the strong bond of union among all religious faiths."

Victor A. Friend, chairman of the Massachusetts committee of the Conference of Jews and Christians, was in general charge of the dinner. Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel gave the invocation and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Michael J. Ahern, S. J., of Weston College.

Freud Gravely Ill After Nazi Police Visit

VIENNA, March 22 (AP)—Sigmund Freud, 82-year-old "father of psychoanalysis," was seriously ill today after a visit of secret Nazi police to his home last night, close friends said.

The informants said the police took the Jewish scientist's passports and closed the doors of his home. Offices of the company which has published Freud's books also were closed.

Freud was ill when Adolf Hitler absorbed Austria into the German realm, and for several days was not told of the changes affecting his country and his race.

Austrian Protestantism, unlike the church in Germany, today made its peace with the Nazi regime.

LEADER SWEARS LOYALTY

Dr. Kauer, president of the Austrian Evangelical Supreme Church Council, became the first church official of any state to take an oath of loyalty to Hitler, administered by Oswald Menghin, minister of education in the Vienna government.

He was followed by all his subordinate officials.

After the ceremony, Dr. Kauer delivered an address which contrasted sharply with the attitude of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, now in a German concentration camp, and the Protestant movement in Germany. He said:

"Every German swears voluntarily, in the fullest happiness, an oath of loyalty to the beloved Fuehrer, who liberated all Austrians, irrespective of their religious beliefs, from an unbearable yoke."

The Austrian Evangelical Church has about 300,000 members.

PRUSSIAN CHURCHES MOURN

Reports from rural Prussia today said churches in many smaller towns and villages had draped their altars in black to indicate mourning for Niemoeller's continued incarceration.

Indications that Hitler was determined to win Austrian Socialists to the Nazi cause by offering them work were given in a ceremony today at the Vienna city hall.

Vienna's new mayor, Hermann Neubacher, reinstated 11 firemen who had been imprisoned by the previous regime because they were Socialist leaders in the 1934 civil war, in which Austrian Socialists were crushed.

"Do you promise to fight from now on for Adolf Hitler as you fought for Socialist ideals in 1934?" the mayor asked.

"We promise," they answered.

Czech Aid Refused By British Cabinet

Russian Drive to Halt Fascists Also Rejected; Parley With Duce

By KINGSBURY SMITH

International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, March 22—The British cabinet today adopted a program for the general appeasement of Europe but declined to guarantee military assistance to Czechoslovakia in event of attack.

The program will be outlined to the House of Commons by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain on Thursday, when he will stress the independence of Czechoslovakia, but not commit the government to armed assistance.

The cabinet also rejected Soviet Russia's proposal for a conference of democratic powers to halt Fascist aggression on the grounds it would serve no useful purpose.

The government also quickened the pace of its efforts to reach an agreement with Premier Mussolini before Chancellor Hitler visits Il Duce in Rome during May.

Chamberlain promised his foreign policy pronouncement after receiving notification from the British dominions that they will oppose any fresh British commitments in Europe.

One of the chief points in the British pressure campaign on Mussolini is an effort to exact a promise of withdrawal of Italian troops from Spain.

The expected agreement with Il Duce, for which negotiations are reaching the final stage, may be concluded by the end of this week.

Lithuania's Cabinet Quits in New Crisis

KAUNAS, Lithuania, March 22 (INS)—Fear of a new Baltic crisis spread today amid reliable reports that the entire Lithuanian cabinet had submitted its resignation owing to public indignation against the government's surrender to Poland's ultimatum.

There were unconfirmed rumors, however, that President Antanas Smetona had refused to accept the resignation until Premier Jonas Tubelis returns from a trip to Switzerland.

Meanwhile, the President was believed to be striving to line up a new government and avoid fresh friction with Poland.

It was believed War Minister General Stasys Dirmantas may succeed Tubelis, if the government's resignation is accepted.

Meanwhile, students entered a 10-day period of mourning over Lithuania's acceptance of the Polish ultimatum. Other sections of the population demonstrated their "humiliation."

There were reports that 50,000 Polish troops and scores of warplanes were still massed near the frontier, despite an order from Warsaw to begin withdrawal of these forces.

Franco's Troops Push Sea Drive

HENDAYE, France, at the Spanish Frontier, March 22 (AP)—The Spanish insurgents today reported that they had driven government troops from five barricaded trench lines at Valdeinfierno, in fierce hand-to-hand conflict.

Resuming their drive toward Catalonia and the Mediterranean coast, the insurgents launched a smashing attack in the sector 10 miles east of Alcaniz and about 25 miles from the sea.

Government troops suffered 2000 casualties in a futile effort to stop the offensive, said insurgent dispatches, which reported capture of 300 machine-guns.

In the Huesca sector, 70 miles northwest of Caspe, another insurgent force broke through government lines and stormed the village of Lierta, in an attack designed to eliminate the salient west of Huesca. Huesca has been almost surrounded by government troops for a year.

It was officially reiterated, however, that "the Liechtenstein government is determined to preserve the independence of the country."

Senate Set to Speed Action on Navy Bill

WASHINGTON, March 22 (INS)—The United States today served notice on the world it proposes to build the biggest navy afloat, while welcoming conference of naval powers to slash all armaments.

Overwhelmingly endorsing President Roosevelt's rearmament program, the House passed the billion-dollar naval expansion bill by a vote of 291 to 100.

Authorizing a 20 per cent increase in the United States fleet, proponents declared the bill would give America a navy capable of protecting American rights against aggression anywhere in the world.

Senate leaders have promised speedy passage of the bill in that branch. Debate was expected to start this week.

A saving clause in the bill placed America on record as "welcoming" a disarmament conference.

SEES WAR GESTURE

It specifically directed the President to suspend any part of the expansion program, in event leading powers agree to reduce armaments.

Representative Maury Maverick (D.) Texas, leader of the "one hundred opposition," branded the bill as a "gesture toward war in the Far East" and demanded Congress immediately erect an adequate defense against naval and air raids on coast cities.

He charged coastal cities are now defenseless against such raids.

The bill, carrying a total authorization of $1,113,546,000, would add 46 fighting ships, 22 auxiliary vessels, 950 war planes and a $3,000,000 dirigible to the navy.

It also carried $27,000,000 for experimental purposes.

HITS FRANCO RAIDS

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, meanwhile, placed America beside Britain and France in protesting Franco air raids on the civil population of Barcelona in the Spanish war.

The army has revealed full plans for a skeleton mobilization drill, to be held March 28 to April 9. It will test plans for mobilizing 2,000,000 within four months in event of war.

U. S. Bills Japan For Panay Loss

WASHINGTON, March 22 (AP)—The State Department announced today that Ambassador Grew had presented Japan with a bill for the deaths, injuries and damages caused by the bombing by Japanese planes of the American gunboat Panay and three American tankers on Dec. 12, 1937.

The amount involved was not disclosed but it is indicated to be more than a million dollars.

The State Department recalled, in submitting the bill to Tokyo:

"The Japanese government stated that it would make indemnification for all the losses sustained."

Three Americans were killed and several more injured in the bombing. The Panay was sunk and the tankers seriously damaged.

A quick settlement of the bill is expected.

The President's comments, which will appear daily, are entirely new and exclusive. They have never before been published, in any magazine or elsewhere. And they will not be published again until the issuance of the President's books, after the newspaper series is concluded.

In the articles derived from the President's commentaries, he remarks upon subjects both national and international—business, both big and little; farming, neutrality, holding companies, the TVA and regional planning, world-peace and disarmament, social security, the good-neighbor policy, currency, the CCC and unemployment, the NRA, AAA and kindred agencies.

He relates, too, incidents of his famous pre-inaugural meetings with President Hoover, of the Ethiopian oil concession, of the munitions embargo, both in relation to Spain and otherwise.

Plan to Reduce Boston Taxes Outlined

Proposals Sent to Legislature by Research Bureau

An appeal to the Legislature "to relieve Boston taxpayers from drains beyond the capitol of Mayor Tobin" was made today by the Boston Municipal Research Bureau.

The bureau cited specific recommendations which included:

1—Suspension by Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank S. Goodwin of registrations on automobiles on which the excise tax remains unpaid.

2—Permanent re-registration of voters, with duplicate signature cards, to obviate recurrence of such voting scandals as surrounded the elections last fall.

3—More state aid to Boston in highway and street building and maintenance.

CHARGE VOTE COSTS

Emphasizing the need for drastic improvement in the manner of registering voters, the bureau declared:

"A factor in Boston's high election costs is that three election commissioners receive $5000 a year and a chairman $6000. Only two commissioners are most generally actually needed and they should serve only part time."

The bureau stated that a nation-wide study in 1929 showed that it cost Boston 81 cents a voter for registration while the average for other cities was less than one-fourth of Boston.

"Boston has 47 regular office employes (in the election department) while other cities have as few as two," the report stated. "Boston's regular election personnel has varied little since the study was made."

Attacking moves for new and costly metropolitan projects, the bureau charged that Boston pays from one-half to two-thirds of most metropolitan costs.

"Boston cannot assume added burdens," the report warned, asking the legislature to "go slow" on additional projects at this time.

PLANS BOSTON AID

The bureau urged specific "slowing down" on the proposed $10,000,000 appropriation for a tunnel, designed to eliminate potential pollution menace in the present system of bringing water from the western part of the state.

Citing that Boston now has $1,400,000 outstanding in uncollected auto excise taxes, the bureau declared that action by the registrar of motor vehicles against delinquents would be "much cheaper and simpler" even though the city has the right to seize property, advertise and sell it.

Discussing the question of state aid to the city from the highway fund, the bureau made the following recommendations under which Boston could receive aid:

1—Increase by the state of miles of state highways in Boston (now five miles) by developing arterial streets as through ways and financing their reconstruction and maintenance from the state highway fund.

2—More highway grants.

3—Expand state aid to metropolitan boulevards.

$15,000 Bid For Ticket Is Spurned

Group to Take Chance On Sweeps Race With Favorite

Daniel Healey of 2044 Parkway, Everett, today called police to drive from his door two men who repeatedly offered him $15,000.

Healey, who is married and father of two children, holds a ticket jointly with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Twomey of 44 Green street, Charlestown, under the name of "The Four Of Us," which drew the horse Provocative, a favorite in the Grand National at Aintree.

At the same time Captain Frank H. A. McKeon, attached to Fort Devens and who holds a sweepstakes ticket on another favorite horse, "Red Freeman," revealed a syndicate had offered him $4500 for half of his ticket—but he won't sell.

Healey telephoned police after the strangers pounded in his door to raise the ante for the fifth time since it was learned he held a lucky sweepstakes ticket.

BID RAISED

First the offer was $3800 but it was successively jumped to $8400, $12,000 and then to $15,000 early this morning.

"I can't have my rest disturbed like this," he telephoned police. "Come down and drive these fellows away from my door."

Police did but the ticket buyers had vanished.

"I wouldn't take $100,000 for this ticket," Healey declared today.

"After all, I'll never miss what I've never had and my chances of winning $150,000 are as good as the next fellow's as long as I've got a favorite."

WON'T QUIT WORK

Healey, an employe of the Bea con Oil Company, said he won't quit work if he wins.

He plans to send his wife and two children, William, 10, and Maureen, 12, on a vacation trip abroad to collect the money if Provocative comes down in front.

"No matter who comes along, the money goes in the bank," he added. "And I'll sell that ticket to no man."

It remains Captain McKeon's or Healey's horses "run in the money," they automatically receive $2202.

Captain McKeon, stationed at Fort Devens for the past six years, is married and has six children.

Mexicans Hold 3 Americans As 'Hostages'

Cardenas Asks Firms To Submit Claims For Oil Property

MEXICO CITY, March 22 (INS) —President Lazaro Cardenas sought today to reassure Mexican business, shaken by his decree expropriating the properties of 17 American and British oil firms valued at $500,000,000.

The President made his statement after three executives of the American - owned Huasteca Oil Company were seized at Tampico as "hostages" by Mexican workers claiming back pay.

Cardenas said business had nothing to fear and that he had confidence in the attitude of the mining industry and other enterprises which had feared they also might be confiscated.

At the same time, however, he declared his seizure of the petroleum industry was an "imperious necessity." He added steps would be taken to stabilize Mexican currency.

Cardenas invited the petroleum companies to file claims for indemnization.

Meanwhile, fears were felt for the safety of the three executives held as "hostages."

The men, held prisoners in a terminal across the Panuco river from Tampico, were Edward Borrego, American citizen and resident manager for the concern; Benito Loyola, the company's chief counsel, and Frederic Tenny, personnel manager.

The latter's captors declared they would not release them until they are paid by the Huastaca Company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Corporation of New Jersey.

Borrego sent an appeal to the American consul to force his release.

Gen. Johnson Says:

COAL IS 'SICKEST'

Industry Loses NRA Gains

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 22—Recent years have revealed no worse performance of utter bureaucratic ineptitude, incompetence and public damage than the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

HUGH S. JOHNSON

Coal is our sickest industry. Expanded in facilities during the World War, right afterward it began to run into the growth of four influences tremendously contracting its markets—hydroelectric power, fuel oil, natural gas and much more economical methods of using coal.

Coal mining is an expert craft. Miners do not shift easily to other occupations. Even when there is work enough for one out of three, many families remain clustered around the pits. There are more than three million people—miners and their families—dependent on this industry.

It was cured by code agreement among operators on a schedule of prices for coal that would permit reduction of hours underground to spread the work, increase of earnings to live, and a reasonable profit on efficient operation.

The price level from which this was started was so low that there was practically no consumer complaint. It worked. It was arranged within a few weeks. Operators, miners and the public were satisfied. Slamming John Lewis has become a favorite all-weather sport, but you won't hear any mine owners deny it.

There stands an incontestable record and proof of what could be done and of how to do it. When NRA went out, this structure began to fall to pieces with everything and workers wanted it restored.

One Guffey Act was passed to permit this—and declared unconstitutional. The present act, creating the Coal Commission was passed 11 months ago and has not been held invalid . . .

What has resulted? A bewildering maze of muddy, minute and unnecessary regulations. The erection of a mammoth but futile sterile bureaucracy. Internal bickering and dissension. A God-awful mess of political jobbery. But for miners and employers nothing but grief and threatening danger and on present prospects, nothing can be expected for many months.

In the meantime, the price situation is worse than in early 1933, and the labor situation promises to be. Most operators are losing money in millions. There is no possibility at present prices of maintaining wages at present rates.

Jobless, payless miners can't pay dues. The great companies that can survive are highly mechanized. Hundreds of thousands of jobs and union membership in the pits of Hell are threatened here. The danger can hardly be exaggerated.

For this whole situation, the blame is single and direct on the ineptitude and incompetence of the coal commission. The old NRA coal division could have restored stability in three month. It is fair to say that, because it once did that—starting from raw and against fierce opposition in a demoralized, disorganized industry.

I think it could do it now in a month because of that experience and the fact that nearly the whole industry now thirsts for it. This is a bungle so serious that the President, himself, should step in on it.

HUGH S. JOHNSON.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, March 22—With war threatening in Europe there has been a serious inner Cabinet discussion over the sending of 19,800,000 cubic feet of helium to Germany.

This is enough helium to aid materially in blowing up the City of London, or Paris, or to provide gas for the operation of military balloons during an entire war.

In fact, it is a precious military gift to any belligerent nation, and so anxious has Germany been to get it that a Nazi ship has been moored at Houston, Texas, waiting to load it aboard and race for bombing.

The gas was mined at Amarillo, Texas, and has been held awaiting Nazi word from Washington before being sent to Houston and loaded aboard the German vessel. It was actually about to be dispatched when watchful Secretary of the Interior Ickes got skeptical regarding Germany's use of the gas and intervened.

The helium was to be sold to Germany under the law passed by Congress last year after the Hindenburg disaster. However, there are some neat jokers in the present law which went unnoticed until caught by Ickes. One of these is the fact that a Zeppelin only requires 6,000,000 cubic feet of helium, whereas Germany is getting 19,800,000 cubic feet this year.

She has specified that she wants a little extra for experimentation and in order to send the new Zeppelin around Europe—but this does not explain her getting three times as much as required. In addition to this, Germany is to receive 40,000,000 cubic feet of helium within the next two years.

HELIUM ACT—Behind the helium deal was approved by Joe Green, state department munitions controller, and by army and navy experts, on the ground that it was in line with an act of Congress. Since Congress passed the act, however, Europe has been seething, and Hitler has given every indication he will provoke war if anyone thwarts him.

The inter-departmental committee has asked for pledges that the helium will be used only for scientific and commercial transportation purposes; and apparently cabinet members have been naive enough to believe that Germany will keep her word.

Meanwhile, a German Zeppelin lobbyist, residing in the Mayflower Hotel, has been urging immediate action; while Herman Goering, Nazi war marshal, also an official of the Zeppelin company, has been clamoring for the helium.

Note—The United States has virtually complete monopoly on helium—and it is almost indispensable to balloon or Zeppelin operation in war. Helium gas bags cannot be readily shot down, because helium does not explode when hit by a bullet. And the Army has perfected a system of patching balloons in mid-air so that balloons can continue buoyant even when punctured by bullets.

SIGMUND FREUD — All last week the State Department was busy sending frantic telegrams to Austria to try to save the lives of various people in danger of being shot by Hitler. One of the most famous of this group was Dr. Sigmund Freud, founder of psychoanalysis.

Freud, it was reported back to Washington, was bitterly hated by Hitler, who had given orders for his immediate arrest.

Freud will be 82 years old in May and is not well. Whether the State Department will be successful in its entreaties that his life be spared remains to be seen.

AMOS 'N' ANDY CAPPER—One Washington cop is firmly convinced that Senator Arthur Capper.

He was patrolling Connecticut avenue in a squad car one evening last week when he saw a big automobile tearing past at over 60 miles an hour. After a run of several blocks the policeman finally caught the speeder.

To his astonishment, the driver was Kansas' veteran Senator Arthur Capper.

"Now, senator," protested the policeman, shaking his head disapprovingly, "you ought not to be driving at such a rate with all this traffic on the street. I'm afraid I'm going to have to give you a ticket. You were violating the law, you know."

"Yes, I was," readily admitted the senator from Kansas. "But you see I have a most important engagement at my apartment at 7 o'clock and I simply must get there on time."

"Well, of course," replied the cop, remembering that Capper has long been a friend of the capital and its firemen and policemen, "that's different. In fact we want you to your hotel so there won't be any more delay or trouble."

So Capper dashed home behind a screaming police siren that opened a way for him. Leaving the car he thanked the accommodating cop:

"I certainly appreciate this, officer," he said. "You see, I listen to Amos and Andy on the radio at this time every night, and I'd have hated like anything to miss their broadcast."

Gridder Tosses Headgear in Demmies' Ring

Revere Hurley Appears At Same Time to Tangle Horizon

By ALFRED D. WHELTON

Two new candidates for state offices appeared on the political horizon today, one a Democrat and the other a Republican.

With the backing of the Gridiron Club of Massachusetts, an organization of high school and college football coaches and officials, George H. "Bulger" Lowe's headguard is in the Democratic ring for lieutenant-governor.

John J. Hurley of 94 Lynnway, Revere, announced that he will seek the Republican nomination for state treasurer and receiver-general.

Hurley's announcement promises to complicate matters for William E. Hurley, also a Republican, former postmaster of Boston and present treasurer.

In making the announcement, Hurley said that he withdrew his plans for candidacy in 1936 upon advice of the Republican state committee and in the interest of party harmony.

He charges that the treasurer's office at the present time is too political and that the duties of it require the services of one with financial ability and experience.

"My campaign," he said, "will be based principally upon the fact that for over 16 years I have been closely identified with the banking business and financial interests of this Commonwealth."

Hurley is slightly over 40 years old. He points to it as an appeal to both young Republicans and conservatives among the older generation of that party.

Lowe is the present chairman of the Arlington board of selectmen and has made many friends in all sections of the state through his athletic activities.

He has been through many campaigns in town elections and is strictly not a novice in the political game.

Behind him is an experience of athletics, an enviable war record that includes the award of the famous Croix de Guerre for bravery on the battle fields of France.

The Gridiron Club announced endorsement of him as a candidate for the second position among state officials at a meeting held Saturday night but news of it did not come out until today.

McGrath Is Named Port Collector

JOSEPH McGRATH

ley, however, declared that it was understood by the administration in Washington that the naming of McGrath carried the condition that he be permitted to serve as head of the Democratic party until the end of the November campaign.

Auditor Buckley disclosed that at a meeting last week state Democratic committee members unanimously passed a resolution to that effect. He said the resolution was forwarded to the President, Senator Walsh and other administration leaders.

"I am delighted at the appointment," Buckley said, adding that McGrath was the "one element who can unite all the factions in the party."

At the same time the Boston Evening American learned that all the state Democratic leaders, including Governor Hurley, are insistent that McGrath remain as chairman of the Democratic State Committee until the end of the forthcoming political campaign.

David McCarthy of Boston, vice-chairman of the State Democratic committee, was being mentioned as the possible successor to McGrath at such time when the latter resigns.

McGrath was a member of the first Boston City Council in 1927. In 1933 he was president of that body. He lives at 10 Caspian way, Dorchester.

Deal Replies 'No' On Tax Revision For Business

Shift in Profits Levy Opposed by Magill At Hearing

WASHINGTON, March 22 (INS) —A flat "no" was the Roosevelt administration's answer today to demands of the nation's business for drastic revision in New Deal taxation.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill, appearing before the Senate Finance Committee, clashed with business-as-usual committee itself by rejection of appeals for repeal of the corporate undistributed profits tax and substitution of the capital gains levy in the new revenue bill.

Even revival of the principle of the "third basket" tax proposal—a sky-high imposta upon closely held or family corporations—was suggested by Magill, 43-year-old tax expert, who served in the Treasury department under Republican Secretaries Mellon and Mills.

Deploring loss of revenue to the government because of tax-exempt governmental securities, Magill said he thought the Supreme Court would uphold a statute to tax income from future issues of governmental securities; that is, a law permitting the federal government to tax income from state and local bonds, and giving it the new power to tax federal bond issues.

While observing there was "some doubt" on whether a constitutional amendment would be necessary to plug that tax loophole, Magill said:

"However, I believe that the Supreme Court would uphold such a statute, although they might not have done so several years ago."

Reminding the committee that President Roosevelt is insistent that there be no net decrease in the amount of revenue through the pending revision of the tax bill, Magill said the Treasury Department does not expect business assistant that McGrath remain as ditions to be as prosperous this year as they were in 1937 and 1936.

Opposition to the House provision for an increase of 25 cents a gallon in the tax on whiskey, to make the total $2.25 a gallon, was registered by Magill. That boost was estimated to yield the government an additional $19,000,000 in revenue.

The Treasury spokesman also objected to the House provision for a six-cent increase in the three-cent a pound tax on imported pork. The pork tax is "unlikely" to produce any revenue, he said.

Society's Fashionables Flock To Premiere at Colonial

By BETTY ALDEN

THE POPULARITY of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne and the opportunity of seeing a world premiere proved to be an irresistible attraction for theater-goers last evening . . .

Almost all of Boston's prominent first nighters took their seats in the Colonial Theater before the first curtain rose on "The Sea Gull," an old Chekhov play being revived by the Lunts . . . and as they are giving Boston audiences the first peek at this new production before opening in New York next Monday, last evening's production constituted a world premiere . . .

MRS. PAUL WALTON

Mrs. Randolph Morgan Appleton and her daughter, Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., were two of the distinguished members of the audience . . . Mrs. Appleton wore a beautifully cut black silk dinner gown with a long necklace of large pearls and Mrs. Bird brightened her black gown with a wrap of scarlet velvet . . .

Two attractive post debs in the audience were Anita Curtis, who was gowned in a black and gold lame dress with a novel necklace of mother-of-pearl discs the size of fifty cent pieces, and Marion Minot . . . two young men were in their party . . .

Way down front Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar Lockwood entertained a couple of friends in a jolly theater party . . . Mrs. Lockwood's lovely gown of gold metal cloth was made with a circular skirt and topped with a short sable cape . . .

Dorothy Pierce and her fiance made an attractive twosome as they sauntered down the aisle together . . . Dottie in a black dress and silver fox scarf, and a new gray shadow plaid coat and hat . . . Gwen Livermore Woodward was with her bridegroom, Charles Woodward, and the Paul Waltons had their regular opening night seats . . .

Richard Whorf, a prominent member of the Lunts' company, had a surprise awaiting him at the end of the performance . . . for, unbeknownst to him, his wife had come on from New York at the last minute to see the opening . . . she sat quietly in the audience till the last curtain before letting him know . . . her black day time dress was brightened with a draped turban of turquoise blue silk . . .

Selston Kings Entertain

MR. AND MRS. GELSTON KING entertained a small group of friends including Dean Wheatley, one of their kindred spirits in the hunting set . . . Mrs. John Gorham Palfrey was an interested first nighter as was Mrs. William Gaston, who brightened her black dinner gown with beautiful diamonds and a sable cape . . .

Mrs. William H. Coburn carried a small, old fashioned bouquet with her pretty gown of turquoise lame and a short ermine cape . . . Jack Royce, who is so jovial about having been called "bulky Jack Royce" in a national magazine's recent write-up of his dog show winnings, escorted a young lady . . . Jack, as most dog fanciers know, has a small champion Pekingese, which is quite an incongruous contrast to his own size . . .

Lavinia Sabine, Becky Hobbs and Mr. and Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs comprised another foursome of theater goers . . . and still others in the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Prouty, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hastings, Lydia Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Eben Draper, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. L. Ropes and Mrs. James Hooper . . .

Patrick Morgans Hosts at Art Exhibit

A JOINT EXHIBITION of paintings by both husband and wife is quite a novelty . . . and attracted a number of socially prominent art lovers to the Grace Horne Galleries yesterday afternoon . . .

The exhibitors were Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Morgan of New York and, since Mrs. Morgan is the former Maud Cabot of Boston, she received a very warm welcome from her many friends who dropped in to congratulate both her and Mr. Morgan . . .

While Mrs. Morgan, dressed in a modish black wool costume with long panels of beige down the front, and a delicate corsage of yellow and green orchids, discussed her landscape and still life paintings with friends in one room, her husband welcomed friends in an adjoining gallery where his paintings lined the walls . . .

Among the many visitors were Mrs. Thomas C. Thacher, Jr., cousin of Mrs. Morgan, who wore a very becoming toast brown pleated dress with dark brown accessories, and her father-in-law, Mr. Thomas C. Thacher of Beacon street . . .

Mrs. James Lawrence, Jr., was the most springlike figure in the room in her navy blue ensemble trimmed with white and a high crowned white hat on her blonde curls . . . Patricia White, debutante niece of Mr. Morgan, strolled about the galleries, intently studying each painting . . . and others were Mrs. Wiley Robb and her sister, Mrs. R. Wiley Childs; Nathaniel Saltonstall, Mrs. Albert M. Kales, John Batchelder, Jr., W. G. Russell Allen, Thomas Metcalf, Mrs. A. L. West Movius and Mrs. Dunbar Lockwood . . .

Junior Philomatheia's Penny Sale Big Success

A permanent wave going for three . . . a two dollar laundry premium for two . . . a jug of Chianti for one . . . Sounds as jumbled as the tobacco auctioneer's chant but the prelude's just an indication of the hurried bargaining and bidding which went on last night as the Junior Philomatheians converted the B. C. library auditorium into a hubbub as it staged its annual penny sale.

The crowd came early and stayed late until the last trophy was raffled off and the winner of the Bermuda cruise, a Louise Zuchelli, of Wellesley Hills, was announced. Mob would be a better chosen word to adequately describe the throng . . . about 1500 in numbers . . . which surged through the doors, occupying every seat in the hall.

DIRECTED EVENT

The entire affair was a great tribute to the executive ability of Mrs. Byron Tosi, who was capably assisted by her two pretty sisters, Angela and Mary Albre. Angela directed the Bermuda raffle, while Mary concentrated her attention on the score of ticket sellers.

Jitney lunch . . . a flower mart, which would give a bit of stiff opposition to the current flower show . . . nothing had been forgotten or overlooked in planning the scholarship benefit.

And while the throng tossed away its ticket stubs on some fancied article, Mary Snyder and her waitresses fed them tasty weinies and steaming coffee. A mighty attractive group of waitresses they made, their washable frocks topped by maroon and gold aprons and headbands . . . Katherine Forbes chose an Indian print . . . Peggy Maloney was similarly attired . . . Flora Murphy selected deep orchid, while Mary Murphy snuggled into a cozy blue knit.

The opposite end of the hall was adorned with a flower booth where Frances Ruttigan and her aides . . . all decorated with Hawaiian leis and flowers in their hair . . . traded tickets for chances on primrose, tulips or daffodils. Helen Bulger was an exceedingly convincing saleslgirl . . . her sapphire blue crepe topped by a lei of peach while Catherine Moore . . . who's responsible for so many of the club's tricky decoration motifs . . . chose the same shade to wear with her dark crepe.

Glad-eyed Marion Grady trying to interest everyone in her jug of wine while Rose Gunning displayed the fine points of a combination ash tray and lighter . . . and Helen Warren concentrated on the last minute returns on cruise sweepstakes.

MALES CLUB HISTORY

In the merry throng of stue collectors were Mary Rita Foohy, Frankie Doyle, Miriam Donald, Betty Sutton and Dot Sullivan . . . The chore of checking and collecting green-backs was detailed to the usual executive group . . . Mary Clarissa McCarthy, Fran O'Halloran, Kay Egan, Florence Stock, Catherine Curley and numerous others.

The affair certainly made social and financial history for Junior Philomatheia's annals.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

EX-TR-EE! Not on any police blotter, and consequently hitherto undisclosed to the public, a spectacular piece of minor criminology is being investigated two weeks after the crime . . . And here's a tip to the thieves . . . If they'll return Attorney-General Paul Dever's pistol everyone concerned, including the state police, will be very grateful . . . There may even be talk of leniency . . . The popular A. G.'s car was broken into while it was parked not far from the Hub Fogg Art Museum in Cambridge . . . The thieves smashed the lock, and cut a hole under the dash board compartment where the state's prosecutor keeps his revolver while driving . . . The pistol was the major piece of loot.

(Offstage whisper to the attorney general: Dear Paul, please do not deny this story which we both know is true. In the Sunday column, if you remember, your correspondent admitted frankly that he was nearly convinced you are not going to run for Governor this year.)

* * *

CLANG, CLANG:

To their great consternation, the William Michelfelders of Beacon street found their kitchen ablaze while they were playing a wordgame and the dinner was cooking . . . Mrs. Michelfelder, who professionally is Ruth Marsters, your music critic, reached for the telephone, got a quick connection with Fire Headquarters, and exclaimed:

"My kitchen is on fire. Please hurry."

"We always do hurry, lady," came the reply from the courteous reilly-man on the other end of the line . . . And he wasn't fooling, either.

Both Mrs. Michelfelder and her husband, Bill, the reporter, were astonished at the alacrity of the response to their summons . . . But their amazement was even greater when the first words from the mouth of the officer in charge of the company were:

"Well, how did we do, lady?"

* * *

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:

There was a natural confusion about that Putnam-Page marriage in Keene, N. H., which we broadcast the news first that "David Putnam of the publishing family was quietly united to Raymond Page at Keene, N. H., Thurs." . . . George Palmer Putnam, widower of Amelia Earhart, has a son named David B. . . . The bridegroom's name was David B. Putnam, but he is a native of Keene and works in his father's machinery factory . . . Incidentally, the father of the bride, Rosemond Castle, Page, is named in news dispatches as Mann B. Page . . . Would that possibly be the veteran playwright scenarist who coauthored "The Back Slapper" with the late Paul Dickey?

Lieutenant Governor Kelly writes from Miami Beach that Mrs. Kelly is "slowly improving with good weather" . . . "Uncle Bill" Robinson, who is drawing plenty of customers to Keith's Memorial, Saturday, from the theater to Slade's in Roxbury after the final show. "Uncle Bill" is doing his bit to help his friend, Renner Slade, who is observing his 8th anniversary in business . . . Persistent talk of U. S. Atty. Francis J. W. Ford becoming a federal judge soon has the oracles debating whether William T. McCarthy or his other assistant, John A. Canavan, will succeed Chief Ford as prosecutor.

Tommy Dorsey's swing arrangement of "Song of India" is reported as the best selling record since "Dardanella" was a popular disc. The "Song of India" arrangement was written one night by Dorsey and his arrangers "between sets" . . . Dr. Tehyi Hsieh, the visiting Chinese savant, will speak at Holy Name Community House, West Roxbury, Thursday night, in aid of the West Roxbury Boston College Club's scholarship fund.

Uta Hagen, who is cast prominently in "The Sea Gull," won her job by her reading of lines in the presence of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne. Her only previous big-time role in the Le Gallienne show was awarded the same way . . . Miss Hagen learned her trade at the Cape Playhouse. Her father is a U. of Wisconsin professor.

Opposition in Chicago to Maurice Evans, the Shakespearean actor, and the Mercury Theater's "Caesar" (also based on Shakespeare): George Abbott's "Room Service," with Joe Flynn at the publicity helm, has been out-drawing the classical Evans . . . Flynn advertised his attraction "Positively Not Shakespeare" . . . In another ad, the highbrow read: "Shakespeare Says: 'Room Service' is a scream." The blurb was signed: "Bill Shakespeare, Notre Dame football star."

20 Century-Fox Heads Debate Filming 'Uncensored'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor International News Service

Copyright 1938, by International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 22—To produce or not to produce "Uncensored" was the problem that was discussed at great length at a meeting today of 20th Century-Fox executives.

Written by Sonya Levien, the story of "Uncensored" deals with the German invasion of Belgium during the World War. The problem involved is the fact that it parallels in many ways the present situation in Austria, particularly the stringent censorship of the press.

Louella O. Parsons

The "Uncensored" story is that of a young Belgian patriot, who, although physically unfit to serve a tthe front, managed to secrete a printing press and print boldly the truth about the German invasion. He told the Edith Cavell episode and other tragic happenings of those dark days. If "Uncensored" is produced, Jack Oakie will play the boy and Loretta Young the girl who helps him in his dangerous work.

New York's popular district attorney, Thomas E. Dewey, has issued an ultimatum to the movies. No use of his name, either in articles purporting to tell of his life or any fictional character that might impersonate him or his assistants, will be tolerated.

The district attorney has made it known that while he would be loath to invoke the civil rights law to make any public statement, nevertheless, he insists that studios are entirely unauthorized to use him or his office in a motion picture. Although Dewey feels this way, General Pershing has agreed to let Jesse Lasky film his life, and other public figures are not as modest as the racket-busting former special investigator.

Dale Carnegie's book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People," has, as you may know, been sold to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. But you won't learn what Carnegie endeavors to teach because only the title will be used. Just as 20th Century-Fox borrowed only the title of "Love Is Up and Love Is Down" for a recent musicale. The Carnegie title will preface a high-powered comedy with Fannie Brice (Baby Snooks) and Frank Morgan in the leads.

* * *

A line or two: Rumors all over Hollywood that when NICHOLS SCHENCK reaches here in about ten days there will be frantic doings at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer . . . The reason CHARLIE CHAPLIN lingers on at Pebble Beach isn't that story he is supposed to be writing. While there he has worked hard to help free TOM MOONEY and is said to have spent over $60,000 of his own money on the imprisoned man.

Opinion note: With all the recent recession, depression and what have you, it's cheerful news that the pictures got under way at Universal yesterday and eight hundred additional workers went back to the payroll . . . DON AMECHE'S friends rejoicing today that he was improving after an anxious week-end. He had a high temperature caused by streptococci infection. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

There's Romance Again at Met

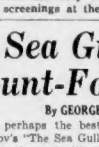
Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper are the happy stars of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," which had its first screenings at the Metropolitan today.

'The Sea Gull' New Lunt-Fontanne Hit

By GEORGE HOLLAND

What is perhaps the best English-spoken production of Anton Chekhov's "The Sea Gull" was brought last night to the Colonial Theater by, and with, the Lunts. This American version is by the eminent critic-novelist, Stark Young, who, as a translator, is disclosed by the program as bilingual, an unsuspected talent of the man whose tender "So Red the Rose", was a fine piece of writing.

The play is more than a translation. It is a competent rewriting of the original which makes the text almost modern, and the characters almost believable. Some acting of the play, however, defies its translator in his attempt to possess an audience and make the characters almost believable. Some acting of the play, however, defies its translator in his attempt to possess an audience and make the characters almost believable.



Alfred Lunt

Alfred Lunt shuffles his characters off and on stage so that the next scene may begin on a bit of light and gets a chance, enjoys the common failing of gushing over a "discovery."

Miss Hagen as an exquisite young thing, whose acting is luminous and professional. She should go far in her career. Margaret Webster contributes one excellent scene in a minor bout with a bottle of vodka and the wit and perception of Boris Trigorin (Mr. Lunt). The scene could have been overplayed. It was not. Miss Webster won a round of handclapping for her work. Harold Moffet, Edith King, John Barclay, as the doctor philandering in philosophy, and C. J. Whitehead, were very good.

The laughs are scattered in "The Sea Gull," nor is the message portentous nor the drama very piercing. Your reporter chuckled once, and that was when Miss Fontanne admonishing her unhappy son (Mr. Wharf), implores him after one attempt at suicide not to try it again.

"Remember," gushes Miss Fontanne, as she clucks him under the chin, and gestures with her trigger-finger, "no more clicks." It was funny. The scenery and costuming were interesting.

Oh, yes, the plot! Boy meets girl man meets girl, boy loses girl, boy knocks himself off.

None of the music or no classic is particularly ingenious.

Sterling Program For Paramount, Fenway

A grand treat in screen entertainment is scheduled for patrons of the Paramount and Fenway Theaters, beginning Thursday, when the twin theaters will present one of the happiest combinations of film fare to be shown this season.

Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce and Warren William co-starred in "The First Hundred Years," M-G-M's delightful comedy-romance of modern marriage problems, will share top honors with Damon Runyon's rollicking farce "A Slight Case of Murder," starring Edward G. Robinson with Jane Bryan, Allen Jenkins and Ruth Donnelly.

The timely problem of the wife who is called upon to give up a splendid career in order to make a home for her husband, and who cannot bear the thought of sacrificing her business associations and background, forms the theme of "The First Hundred Years."

Montgomery plays the ambitious husband, Virginia Bruce is his wife, a "big shot" theatrical agent, and Warren William plays her business associate in the picture, a hilarious comedy drama which reaches a grand climax when Montgomery is awarded alimony from his wife as part of the terms of a mad, merry separation.

'Met Brings Comedy to Screen

'Bluebeard's Eighth Wife' Opens in Advance

The Metropolitan Theater management breaks precedent today to give you "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." Paramount's new comedy hit co-starring Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper, two days in advance of the date scheduled for its New England premiere.

On the same bill "Mr. Moto's Gamble" features Peter Lorre as the famous crime-detecting sleuth.

The romantic team of Claudette Colbert, remembered particularly for her delightfully amusing performance in "I Met Him in Paris," and Cooper, whose soldier-of-fortune role in "The General Died at Dawn," "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "The Plainsman" were outstanding characterizations, is something to titivate the fans' interest.

The story, a new version of the famous play by Alfred Savoir, concerns a young American multimillionaire, who, after marrying and divorcing seven wives, marries an eighth who succeeds in taming and bringing him love for the first time. Miss Colbert, in the role of a penniless French aristocrat, who marries him for his money, accomplishes the miracle by letting him understand that she is one woman he cannot wrap around his finger.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" has been directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

Newsreel's Bill

The Newsreel Theater's newsreel program today and tomorrow include, besides the four leading newsreels, a Popeye cartoon. Charlie McCarthy in "Free as Air," a Bert Lahr feature and a travelogue, "Wonder Spots of America."

New Musical To Shubert

Dwight Deere Wiman, who gave Boston "On Your Toes" and "Babes in Arms," will bring his newest musical, "I Married An Angel," with Dennis King and Vera Zorina, to the Shubert on Monday evening, April 18.

The successful Rodgers-Hart team has adapted the John Vasary play, Johnus Logan, who directed the current Broadway Wiman hit. "On Borrowed Time," is staging it. Choreography for "I Married An Angel" is by Georgs Blanschina, settings are by Jo Mielziner and costumes by John Hambleton.

'Mayerling' For Fine Arts

"Mayerling," the New York critics' choice as the best foreign picture of 1937, comes to the Fine Arts Theater tomorrow. Josephine Baker's "Princess Tam Tam" will have its final showing tonight.

Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux, the picture's co-stars, give superb performances as the ill-fated lovers of this celebrated romance.

There is an original music score by Arthur Honegger, which has been widely acclaimed by public and critics alike. Anatole Litvak has directed with rare skill.

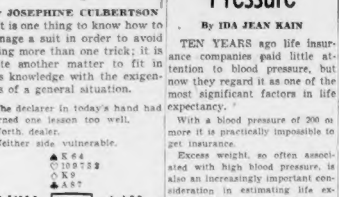
The Greater Danger

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It is one thing to know how to manage a suit in order to avoid losing more than one trick; it is quite another matter to fit in this knowledge with the exigencies of a general situation.

The declarer in today's hand had learned one lesson too well.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the spade jack, dummy played low. East signalled with the seven-spot, and declarer won. Now, to guard against two spade losers, declarer led low to the diamond king, then back to ace and queen, discarding a spade from dummy. He then led a fourth diamond and permitted West's jack to hold the trick, since he figured he might as well throw away dummy's remaining spade.

East discarded the spade deuce on the fourth diamond. West, on lead with the diamond jack, found the only defense that gave his side a chance although that chance depended on a misplay by declarer. West returned a spade. Declarer ruffed, and East's ace fell.

THE WRONG TIME

Now, declarer wiped out his previous good work by his wooden handling of the trump situation.

He knew that the correct way to play such a trump suit is to take successive finesses—that is, to guards against finding both honors guarded in the East hand, and loses only to the king-queen blank in the West hand. But this correct procedure applies only when outside factors are favorable.

In this particular case South should have realized that it would be fatal to let West on lead immediately. If a heart finesse lost, West was sure to lead a third spade and East, if he held one trump honor, would over-ruff the dummy.

Thus, the normal procedure for handling the trump suit to the best advantage should have been ignored in favor of getting out the trumps as rapidly as possible. Instead of finessing, as declarer actually did (intending to return to the club ace and finesse again), he should have led to the ace and returned a second round, in the hope that he would either drop the two honors together or that he would capture a singleton honor with the ace.

—END WAR BARRARITIES—

Good Exercise

HAVE you ever seen a rooster flap his wings when crowing? Try that exercise if you wish to develop the breasts and make the chest fuller.

The correct position before doing the exercise is important. Stand with the feet fairly close together, legs rigid, tummy held in, the flesh just below the ribs contracted. Keep the head on the level, chest high. Close the hands, place them just above the breasts and flap. You can crow, too, if you like. Crowing will air-wash the lungs.

Reduce Weight, Lower Blood Pressure

By IDA JEAN KAIN

TEN YEARS ago life insurance companies paid little attention to blood pressure, but now they regard it as one of the most significant factors in life expectancy.

With a blood pressure of 200 or more it is practically impossible to get insurance.

Excess weight, so often associated with high blood pressure, is also an increasingly important consideration in estimating life expectancy. It is not unusual for the excessively overweight man of thirty-five to be rated at forty-five. According to statistics on the relation of weight to mortality, the increase in mortality appears to be greater when weight exceeds the normal by more than 20 per cent.

Not only do high blood pressure and overweight seem to go together, but the most effective way of lowering the blood pressure is by a decrease in weight. In a medical survey of 1000 cases of overweight, in every case over twenty years of age, the blood pressure was above normal. Without exception, a weight loss was followed by a reduction in blood pressure. As small a weight loss as ten pounds has been found to lower the blood pressure by fourteen points.

Reduction of weight has brought a blood pressure of 200 down to 150, and a blood pressure of 150 down to 130 and even to 120. Such a reduction of the blood pressure was effected in numerous cases which were the subject of dietary experiments. The success of these experiments would seem to indicate that, through weight reduction, both the diastolic and the systolic blood pressure can be reduced by 50 per cent of the amount by which they exceed the accepted normal.

A study of the cases shows a marked parallel between the rise in weight and the rise in blood pressure. In one case the blood pressure rose from 165 to 205 during a weight increase. With the loss of only seven pounds the blood pressure dropped to 175.

A period of overeating with a subsequent weight gain usually causes the blood pressure to shoot right back up again. It has been found very easy to maintain the lowered blood pressure, however, when the diet is such that no weight gain is made.

Except with kidney complications, the dietary for overweight and high blood pressure is a normal reducing diet. Seventy-five to 100 grams of protein daily is not excessive except in case of nephritis. This amount of protein is furnished in one-half pound of lean meat, one to two eggs, one to two glasses of skim milk or buttermilk and three slices of bread. To assure adequate vitamins and proteins the diet must also include daily two or more cooked vegetables, raw vegetable and fresh fruits.

Aside from the fact that they are low in calories the "Max Size Reducing Menus" are adequate in every respect, and they will help you to reduce your weight to normal and, consequently, to lower your blood pressure. If you are fifteen or more pounds above the weight that is normal for your structure, ask your doctor's advice about reducing.

It pays to keep your weight in the neighborhood of normal. All too often when a man achieves the earning power that makes adequate insurance possible he is a poor risk because of overweight and high blood pressure.

YOU CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

Make Scalp Radiantly Clear

IN THESE DAYS of hair that flows freely in cascading loveliness over one's shoulders . . . like the auburn beauty of Ann Sheridan's . . . the need for unremitting care of the very source of loveliness, the scalp, is as important as your daily supply of vitamins. One of the most annoying of scalp ailments that simply prevents the possibility of pure lustre for the hair is dandruff—and if it is your particular bane, you'll be delighted to know about the new liquid which combats it to the death. Arline Gould describes it today.

Enrich Hair With Beauty Through Dandruff Defeater

By ARLINE GOULD

IF THINGS aren't clicking for you this spring . . . if it looks as though you might soon be calling yourself an April fool, a fool for April's illusion . . . take inventory of your personal charms or lack of them . . . and probably you'll find somewhere a slip that is wholly responsible for the impending seizure of blues . . .

Take the point of a sweetly clear snip—could it be that you are an offender in the touchy matter of dandruff?

Personally, we'd rather tell you of an exciting new perfume we've discovered that whispers of mimosa in bloom in Nice . . . but we have news of a dandruff clearer-upper that's so amazingly good we'd be ashamed of ourselves if we put off talking about it for another day!

Beauty editors all over the country have been dithering about it.

* * *

There's a simplicity and tidiness to the treatment that appeals to anyone who's interested in living in high gear, and can't be annoyed with messy things that clinister precious time. Anyone who can't bear to let down on personal attractiveness will marvel at the unobtrusive way this non-greasy, non-odoriferous liquid does its work.

Man or girl—give yourself at least a week to accomplish the treatment. Wash the hair and scalp well, and after the hair is set and dried (set without lotion if possible) moisten the entire scalp thoroughly with the liquid, and rub it in with the finger-tips. Don't remove the excess liquid or dry the hair; comb it while moist.

Apply it once daily for one week, and don't shampoo the hair over this period. For certainty in the defeat of dandruff, continue the liquid's use three times a week for three weeks. Then to keep the scalp shining with health use it perhaps once a week thereafter.

All this won't do its complete task if you don't obey the simple rules of hygiene — keeping your combs and brushes impeccable as your white ties if you're masculine, and your nail lace trifles if you're on the feminine side.

For all further information on the new dandruff-curing liquid, the product of a Chicago skin specialist's clinical research, which is quite inexpensive and to be found in but one Boston shop, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Try This!

TO CLEAN combs and brushes use strong soap suds and a nail brush. Place the brush bristles downward to dry so the wooden base in which the bristles rest won't get water soaked. A narrow brush is more convenient for arranging rolls and singlets than a wide one.

Good Manners

Mrs. Beeckman

SETTING THE TABLE

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am planning to give a dinner soon, with eight guests. I have a cook and waitress, but there are some details of the service about which I am uncertain. Will you help me, please?

This is my menu: Shrimp cocktail; soup; fish course; roast course; salad; dessert.

1. At each place will be a service plate. On this I plan to have a doiley, and then the shrimp cocktail glass with an underplate. Is this correct?

WILMA.

1. With one waitress for eight guests, and with so many courses, it undoubtedly will facilitate your service to have the first course on the table when the waitress announces that "dinner is served."

Before she makes this announcement, she fills the water goblets, lights the candles, places a piece of butter on each bread and butter plate if you are placing bread and butter plates), and then places the first course. But I suggest that you omit the doilies, since they are not necessary, and it means delay in removing this first course.

2. The placing of your silverpieces is correct . . . and since your first course will be on the service plate, the napkin at the left of the forks. But again I suggest, since it will facilitate service, that you also have the salad fork placed.

This will mean too a balancing of the silverpieces, since that will mean that there are three pieces at the right, and three at the left of the plate.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

A Smart Silhouette Frock

By MARIAN MARTIN

If you want to look smart this season, you must be silhouette conscious . . . and here's an example of the alluring young lines that are leading the silhouette movement.

Make up this dress from Pattern 9659 and step out, confident that you are right in the mode. A soft sheer print, like the one pictured, will enhance the charm of the prettily puffed sleeves and the simple bodice and will lend itself well to the swing, upraised waistline.

The skirt follows sleek lines over hips and flares slightly at each side of inverted pleat. Complete Marian Martin Diagrammed Sew Chart included.

'Thou Hast Nourished My Soul'

By ELSIE ROBINSON

How rich life would be if we could have the things we want! How much stronger and wiser, kinder and better balanced we'd become if we weren't everlastingly heckled and handicapped by lack and failure!

OR WOULD WE?

We THINK we would. We're sure that pain and disappointment are senseless and wasteful—in our cases, at least.

SOME people may need such discipline to bring out the best that's in them, but not you. No—you need love, happiness, success . . . they feed you . . . you flower under them.

OR DO YOU?

Strange how we mortals fool ourselves . . . unable to see the real sources of our strength . . . needing to suffer cruelly, sometimes even to die, before we can get an honest perspective on our lives.

There was Jeremiah—that fearless, flaming mystic out of great Israel's past.

How unreal he seemed to you as a child, listening to the thunder of his wrath, the wild wail of his grief, keening and rashing about you in the village church.

But he wasn't unreal.

Jeremiah lived, as surely and hotly, as any man lives today . . . loving, fighting, praying, cursing in great sobbing shouts . . . demanding and demanding those things he thought he needed, as you and I demand and demand today.

Defying even God to deny those demands! Leaving God . . . giving himself over to strange and filthy adulteries of the soul . . . because God would not grant him his way!

A very human man . . . that thundering Jeremiah! And now Franz Werfel, who wrote "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh," has swept the cobwebs of time away and given us the real Jeremiah—flaming soul and furious flesh—in his new book "HEARKEN UNTO THE VOICE." (Viking Press).

A tremendous book . . . barbaric splendor, barbaric horror, heart-breaking pain.

A great book to read at any time, but particularly so in these thoughtful days of Lent, when Life and the Soul pause, for a space, before the Mysteries . . .

No—not a religious book. Save as all Life is religious. Not great merely because it presents a towering, historical figure. BUT GREAT AND TRUE—AND TERRIBLE—BECAUSE IT SHOWS THE STRUGGLING, THE HUMAN SPIRIT.

Not just Jeremiah's stormy spirit, but everyone's. Yours . . . mine . . . each one of us with some cherished dream and the firm belief that we know what's best for us.

Each one of us wanting more power and joy out of life and centering our hearts on some person or thing which, we're sure, will give us our desire.

Jeremiah, in his hot youth, yearning for dusky sweet Zenua. Jeremiah, in his battling manhood, longing to save Jerusalem. And you and I, with our own shining visions.

Well, why not? They're good things, fine things . . . why can't we have them?

We're so eager for a great love, a proud, joyous fight . . . why must God send, instead, shock and shame and tears? Break our hearts with useless pain and wasteful waiting? Snatch away the cup, just as we lift it to our lips? Does that spell justice—or make sense?

Rebellious Jeremiah couldn't think it did. Yet, at the last, a strange enlightening came.

Looking his life over, weighing its profit and loss, his wrung lips whisper their amazement. He had thought to live greatly by success. But instead—

"THOU HAST NOURISHED MY SOUL WITH FUTILITY!" he cries, in Franz Werfel's book. And then, in his immortal "Lamentations" continues—

"THOU' HAST REMOVED MY SOUL FAR OFF FROM PEACE . . . WATERS FLOWED OVER MY HEAD . . . I CALLED UPON THY NAME, O LORD, OUT OF THE DUNGEON . . . THOU HAST HEARD MY VOICE . . . THOU DREWEST NEAR . . . THOU' SAIDST 'FEAR NOT!' . . . O LORD, THOU HAST PLEADED THE CAUSES OF MY SOUL: THOU HAST REDEEMED MY LIFE!"

"THE CAUSES OF THE SOUL"—how far removed they are from our petty, petulant plans!

New Cascade Draperies

Let's take down our dingy, year-before-last curtains. Let's transform our windows into a beautiful picture with these striking new cascade draperies.

See how gracefully they taper to the floor—how effectively the two colors — a rich brown and a soft gold—combine? Still these lovely draperies are almost as easy to stitch up as the straight-up-and-down kind.

The two end draperies you make of the darker material—a brown rayon damask is both good looking and inexpensive. From the lighter material, you make the two inside draperies, the two valances and the jabots which cascade down the side.

The little festoon which so cleverly ties the two windows together is brown and so are the linings of the jabots.

Complete directions and diagrams for curtains and draperies of all types are given in our 40-page booklet, MAKE YOUR OWN CURTAINS AND DRAPERIES. How to estimate, cut, finish, trim.

NEW EASY WAY TO MAKE COOKIES

Crisp, spicy, delicious—and you don't need to roll or cut them out!

• Hallowed memories of childhood and Grandma's cookie jar come flooding back at the first taste of these crisp, crunchy, spicy Ginger Cookies. But these cookies are even finer. For they're made with Spry, the new, purer ALL-vegetable shortening that brings out all their full rich, spicy flavor. And Grandma (bless her heart!) didn't know this new no-work way to make 'em.

Read how below—make some today. But be sure to use Spry. Use Spry for all your baking—cakes, pastry, muffins, biscuits—all your frying, too. You'll find foods doubly delicious, so digestible.

Grandma's Ginger Cookies

1 cup Spry	1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt	1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon soda	1 cup molasses
1 teaspoon cinnamon	¼ cup sour milk
1 teaspoon ginger	4 cups sifted flour

Combine Spry, salt, soda and spices and blend. Add sugar and cream well. (Quickly done with triple-creamed Spry.) Add beaten egg and mix thoroughly. Add molasses and sour milk. Add flour, blend well.

Drop from tip of teaspoon on baking sheets greased with Spry. (Or press through pastry bag.) Let stand a few minutes, then flatten cookies by stamping with a glass covered with a damp cloth. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 7½ dozen.

Treat Cooking As Great Art

By MARTHA LEE

We've a suggestion today for the lady who wanted to know what (if anything) she might do to interest herself in cooking. Perhaps there are others who look upon the culinary art as some chore to be done.

We're going to suggest that you secure and read a copy of The Mystery Chef's Own Cook Book for inspiration. The Mystery Chef will tell you very frankly that he took up cooking as a hobby. But he is as much of an artist at the range as many artists are before the easel.

Many of you have heard us say that we frequently liken the preparation and seasoning of a dish to the brush strokes of a painter at the easel. There are many cooks who share our interest and enthusiasm in this occupation.

The Mystery Chef says "Once you treat cooking as an art it will quickly prove itself to be one of the most fascinating of all arts. To me it is no menace, but I should find pleasure in it even. What does seem strange to me is that so few people do find pleasure in it or know that many of the world's greatest men have found pleasure and relaxation in the art of excellent cooking.

Here is a man who finds real pleasure in his work. His own book is really expert and anyone who can read can carry out its directions. He does not assume that you know anything about cooking terms when he tells you to "fold in an egg" he explains just what one does.

If some of the ideas contained therein appear to be a bit revolutionary to your teachings, just remember that he has gained pleasure from something that you consider an unpleasant task and a bore. Perhaps you too will find fun in following a different procedure.

We find nothing new herein in accord with some of these ideas. We might cite his recipe for Corned Beef and Cabbage (a recipe that we are frequently asked for). When we took a large dinner we did not cook it all in one pot. Let's hear what the Mystery Chef has to say on this subject.

CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE

"If you will follow my very simple recipe for the preparation of this dish you will have a dish that is not only easily digested but that will look really beautiful when served on the plate. It may seem strange that Corned Beef and Cabbage can be made to look beautiful, but it certainly does not in the form that it is usually served.

"Perhaps you are one of those who are fond of Corned Beef and Cabbage but can not eat it owing to its indigestible properties. If so, will follow my simple recipe for cooking cabbage without odor, and cook the cabbage separate from the beef you will then have a dish that can be easily digested by anybody and when it is put on the plates, it looks temptingly beautiful, with the red of the meat, the brilliant green of the cabbage (the color of Spring grass), and the snowy white potatoes. Nothing could look more tempting or taste more delicious.

"Directions for Boiling Meat

"Wash the corned beef in cold water. Then put it in a large pot, and cover well with plenty of cold water. Bring it to the boiling point, then slowly boil for 3 to 4 hours. During the first part of the boiling, there will be a scum formed on top of the water, remove this from time to time during the first part of the cooking, until the scum ceases to form. Cook until tender (the exact time will vary according to the weight and size of the piece of beef being boiled). For the cabbage, follow carefully my directions for cooking cabbage without odor (page 112). And remember do NOT cook the cabbage with the beef."

You'll find recipes for our own American dishes and for many foreign dishes as well. With permission, we take pleasure in passing along one more recipe and hope that you will all enjoy the instructions and suggestions on cookery contained in the book. Perhaps you too will become an enthusiastic artist at the range.

"SCOTCH SCONES"

2 cups sifted flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar (if desired)
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 cup milk (cream or sour)

"Sift into a bowl the 2 cups of flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder and (if you like a little sweet taste to the scones) 2 tablespoons granulated sugar. Mix these around lightly with a knife; then gradually pour the milk in while you stir until all is combined. This makes a rather wet dough.

"Turn onto a pastry board or table some flour, and turn the dough one of the bowl onto the center of floured patch, using the knife to scrape it out. Sift some flour over the dough and over a rolling pin, and roll the dough out to about ½ inch thickness.

"When dough is rolled out, cut in circles, squares or triangles. These cut pieces of dough are now ready for baking, and can be baked in two different ways. Bake them on top of the stove on a griddle over a very slow fire. The scones will take about 25 minutes to bake, 12 to 15 minutes on each side. Remember that when the scones are baked on one side turn them over and bake the other side. Or bake them in the oven as follows:

"Bake in a slow oven, ovens with reliable heat run to 275 deg. F. If you do not have a regulator just use a slow oven and place the scones in dry, ungreased pans. Allow to bake 25 to 30 minutes.

"These scones are used in place of bread in the same way that hot breads are used in this country."

Showers of New Spring Shoes

By ANNICE BRINK

CURVES and sculptured lines are being utilized by shoe designers these days to make even the sizes over seven look small and lovely enough to go into a glass slipper.

Never have shoes fitted so like gloves. Flare-up fronts curve the arch into new delicacy of line. And all of them catch the same young charm that Supy accomplished when she made the little felt pillbox we show on the right as a fitting companion to the chic of the new shoes. Supy bound the hat with satin ribbon and tied it in a flat, loose bow to hang over the curls.

ABOVE, the "lovers knot" shoe in gabardine ties triply over your toes. Perfect with the little dressmaker suit.

CENTER TOP, scalloped and punched wrap-around bands swathe the foot lithely in a two-tone shoe that comes in the most exciting high-shade and pastel and white-and-color combinations. Delightful to wear. And bags to match!

RIGHT, an enormous flange on this patent pump streamlines the ankle remarkably.

Vitamin B Is Needed in Diet of Every Person

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

WE ARE hearing more and more about the vitamins. During the past decade the subject has been discussed in the papers and magazines.

It is a matter which holds the interest of physicians and laymen alike. Yet a great deal of mental confusion exists concerning the vitamins, the nature and function of these substances.

Let us confine our study today to one of the valuable vitamins, the one known as vitamin "B."

Continued failure to get enough of the vitamin leads to a disorder commonly known as "beri-beri" and neuritis.

It is natural that the serious effects produced by a lack of vitamin B should lead the experts to a careful study of the diet. The question which interests them is whether the American diet supplies an adequate amount of this vitamin. The consensus is that our average menus are often lacking in this substance. The modern diet usually includes an abundance of carbohydrates and highly-milled grain products from which the germ and husk have been removed. This does not supply enough lime and vitamins A and B.

Fortunately, it is now possible to reinforce the diet by the use of certain preparations which contain adequate amounts of vitamin B, as well as other needed vitamins and minerals, is assured by the regular use of a varied and well-balanced diet. It should include an abundance of fresh fruits, vegetables, milk, cream, butter, eggs and cereals. The lowly spinach is particularly rich in vitamin B. Disturbances such as I have described are apt to occur when the diet is limited and not varied.

MADGE BELIEVES KATIE LOYAL

By Adele Garrison

CHAPTER 260

ALLEN DRAKE'S perfect impersonation of my father was so eerily nerve-racking to me that once more I had to summon all my will to go on calmly with my defense of Katie.

But from somewhere I pumped up the courage to go on, and there was not even the suspicion of a tremor in my voice as I began my explanation of Katie's meddling with his papers.

"In order to clear the decks for action," I began, "let me admit now that I believe Katie did look over your papers."

I could not distinguish the expression of his eyes through his opaque glasses, but I sensed his astonishment before he voiced it.

"Your tone almost convinces me you, incredibly, believe you can find an excuse for her action."

"Not an excuse," I returned quickly. "There can be no excuse for such a procedure. But I can assure you that years of our association with Katie have proved to us that her occasional meddling—what my mother-in-law calls 'snooping'—has no evil intention, or consequence, behind it.

"It is her chief fault—one which she has strenuously tried to overcome, one to which she now yields only occasionally, and under the strongest temptation. But we realize that it is only an exaggeration of a child's curiosity, and we also realize that she would be incapable of voicing to anyone outside the family anything which she might discover in her meddling."

FLOQUENT DEFENDER

He had listened intently to my defense of my faithful kitchen helper, but I had not realized how impassioned that defense had been until I saw his lips quirk into a quizzical smile.

"Lucky Katie!" he said softly. "To have so eloquent a defender!"

His voice took on its former impish inflections.

"If Katie should ever yield to a murderous impulse, and be tried for her life," he said, "she should hire you to address the jury, no matter how many attorneys she may have. Any group of men would not only return a verdict of not guilty, but would elect her to be mayor, or at least chief of police."

I did not try to answer him, first because I was sure he expected no reply; second, because annoyance at his badinage was constricting my throat muscles.

Mr. Drake was speaking again, and I forced myself to attention.

"I suppose the 'strong temptation' was a desire to find out the details of the chief's secret mission which she thought I had given you."

PRAISES LOYALTY

"Undoubtedly that was it," I said and then added in further defense:

"She has been most loyal in every emergency that has confronted us through the years." I went on steadily, "and has been of the greatest help to us in our premises that my father was ill in the house. I imagine that she naturally felt a certain resentment at being shut out from hearing the latest chapter in a story so fascinating to her, and that her feeling finally goaded her into her inexcusable—but understandable—meddling with your letters."

From behind his baffling glasses, I could feel Allen Drake's appraising scrutiny of my face, and I waited tensely for the caustic comment on my speech which I expected from him.

Beauty Hints For You

THE woman who has a sallow skin should not pin her faith to bleaches. A physical examination will reveal the cause of the yellow cast. Then something can be done.

The most becoming colors for one afflicted with a sallow complexion are golden brown, black or navy blue. Purple, lilac, almost all shades of blue are anything but flattering, should be avoided.

IF YOU find exercising tiresome, get your girl friend to join up, form a case of two. Doing exercise double is more fun than doing a solo. See which one can kick the highest, stretch the tallest.

Lie face downward on the floor, arms extended straight forward above the head. The girl friend will stride over your body, clasp your hands, endeavor to lift you from the floor. Try this five times.

"Right Man" Needed For Happy Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A young woman who cannot find happiness in the company of a young man BEFORE marriage certainly will not have a contented life with him AFTER the wedding ceremony.

That is a matter of simple common sense. Moreover, it is exactly the advice I address to the young girl in Lynn who writes:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We quarrel all the time. I love to dance, he doesn't, and as he declines to take me to dancing parties, I go with someone else.

But it just doesn't work. He gets terribly jealous and hurt.

He expects me to give up going to dances, for him, but I don't see how I can do that, even though I love him.

He hates dancing and won't learn how. I love it and won't give it up. This problem is really more serious than it sounds.

VIRGINIA.

DEAR CHILD

Read again the advice I've given you.

It's just another case of the irresistible force meeting the immovable body, my dear Virginia.

And if neither of you is willing to compromise, it would seem the sensible thing for you to select a dancing partner for life, and the young man to find an Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FOR MEEK HUSBANDS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

My husband is an important man in his shop; if anyone works, he's the man. But I'm the one who makes up his mind in everything.

I pay all the bills. We own our home. If anything important arises he looks to me to solve the problem. He gives me all his money and never questions how I spend it.

I suppose I ought to love him, but I don't. HE IS TOO MEEK AND UNMANLY.

If I'm not around, he attends to things very well, and I should like him to take his place at the head of the home and his business, but he won't.

He asks my opinion and what I say is law.

I'm not really dissatisfied, but you know how a woman likes to be dominated.

MRS. T

DEAR FRIEND

Your letter should be a warning not only to meek husbands but meek wives as well.

The doormat type of human being isn't popular with either sex. A clock that doesn't run is of no value. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

PERENNIAL BACHELOR

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I see a great kick out of reading your column and the other day I was interested in a letter from a girl of 25 who said she would be willing to marry some congenial man if she could meet him, and that she has saved up $3,500.

Well, lady, please don't think I'm offering myself as the bridegroom as I happen to be a perennial bachelor, who has almost capitulated to the one and only, and I may not be a bachelor long.

If I were a girl of 25 and had $3,500 to invest and at the same time had an eye out for a congenial husband, this is the way I'd go about it:

I'd go to a town where there were mills, factories, workshops—plenty of men. Then I'd start a rooming house. No one can size up men like a landlady.

I'd get rid of the grouches and undesirables, and watch the worthwhile boys with steady jobs and good tempers.

If one seemed particularly promising, I'd invite him to an attractive kitchen for a cup of coffee or a light meal, and if I liked him, I'd give him a more substantial meal as time went on.

That lady would be in a strategic position to select the perfect mate.

WORLDLY WISE.

I'm glad to print the gentleman's excellent advice. And I am truly thankful that he hasn't asked me to furnish him with the young lady's name and address. In which case I should have had to turn him down flat, as I never give names or addresses.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

When I was 17 years old, I married the first man who asked me, to escape my home, where my parents were as strict as if it were a jail.

I imagined I loved my husband, who is a good deal older than I am and very jealous of me.

But I realize now that I dont love him at all.

He goes out himself every night, and yet he objects if my girl friends come in to spend the evening with me. He won't allow me to go to a movie, because he said a married woman's place is home.

All this is getting on my nerves. I would have left my husband long ago, if it were not for my two darling little boys to whom he is devoted and for whom he provides very well.

Also, I'm becoming fond of a man of my own age, and I hope the sun may shine again for me some day. UNHAPPY ONE

DEAR FRIEND

No, I'm afraid if you break up your home and jeopardize the home for of those two little boys, the sun won't go even far or under a cloud than it is today.

How do you know this man, to whom you are becoming attached, would be a good step-father to your little sons, even if he would consent to take them?

So many women write me that these men, for whom they have broken up a good home, promised about everything before marriage, and afterwards put the wife's children in institutions.

Another thing to be taken into consideration is this: Have you an evil streak in your make-up?

Probably you as your husband is a good provider and is fond of your children.

It's too bad he's jealous and objects to your having your girl friends in. And I'd suggest to him that these things make you very unhappy.

Achille Ratti Moved to Post Of Vatican Library Prefect

Father Ratti became prefect of the famous Ambrosian Library at Milan and later in 1907, he moved to Rome to become coadjutor to Father Francis Ehrle, S. J., prefect of the Vatican Library.

CHAPTER 17

In 1914 Father Ehrle was created a cardinal and Achille Ratti succeeded to the post of Prefect of the Vatican Library in name as well as in fact.

With the assumption of the post, he was nominated a canon of the arch-basilica of St. Peter's, the chapter of which had already given nine popes to the church.

He was also made a domestic prelate of the Pope and thus took the title of monsignor. Until then he had only been a simple priest, as he was 37 years of age.

A bit o Ratti continued as prefect throughout the war. I was not named a cardinal, as he preferred to remain a priest, but also a titular archbishop.

The old and ancient library could not be changed, he told them. It must remain in ancient form. It must stand the cohesively of ancient posters and gifts.

The Vatican however possessed a modern means equipped according to the most efficient standards of library operation—card shelves, [illegible] devices for handling books and modern cataloguing. the Ambrosian and Vatican Li[illegible] ranked

This was the one he had built.

But before he attained such command he had worked in obscurity for 20 years. He had surrendered to the books and manuscripts. He had never lived up to even beyond the registered walls of the Ambrosian and Vatican Li[illegible]

They were surrounded, he said, with an example of the antique and the classical library and this very fact made it all the more venerable and helped because it had served the centuries and had in its stores the riches which time, the civil service.

"I made the inquiry according to the Pope's desires," Gerretti told me in his own home after he had become cardinal. "I found that every one I questioned was in favor of sending a representative to Poland but so far no mention had been made of who would be best fitted for the post. I thought that that would come after the Holy Father had first decided on the advisability of sending a representative at all.

"When I was received by His Holiness to report on my findings, he saw nothing new in what I had to say.

"He told me that he was convinced himself that Poland should receive a representative. Then he asked me whom I had to propose for the place.

"I did not wish to present a choice of names without due deliberation but the Pope was so annoyed that this list was not ready that I immediately proposed the man who was in my mind.

"I told the Holy Father that there was one man with us in the Vatican who seemed to me admirably fitted. I pointed out to him that he was not in our diplomatic service and for that reason I did not know whether he would want to consider him.

"The Pope asked me whom I had in mind. I told him that it was Monsignor Ratti. He thought for a moment and I waited for an answer. 'Certainly,' he said, 'he is one of the most illustrious lights we have in the Vatican.' He told me that he thought his learning and merits in his field were exceptional.

GIRL About TOWN

By MARJORIE McBRIDE

Marjorie McBride

Mr. Salesman, don't thrust that foot through that door! Don't lead off an interview with a question. And if you'll take the advice of M. J. Lacy, director of the Institute of Advanced Salesmanship in the Chamber of Commerce building, you will abandon several other high pressure sales methods that do you no good.

Even if you are a humble house-to-house pedlar, selling mops or brooms, the foot-in-the-door technique makes you more enemies than friends, Mr. Lacy thinks. It creates an impression of impertinence and frequently kills a sale.

When Mr Lacy suggests that you never start off a sales talk with a question, he is delving deep into sales psychology, and coming up with a pearl of wisdom. Asking a question gives the prospect an opportunity to say "No." That is always a mistake!

Start your sales talk with a positive statement. That is Mr. Lacy's motto. Tell the housewife why she needs a new improved sugar bowl or mop handle. Convince the millionaire he needs a new car, a better insurance policy or another railroad. In short, begin with an offensive.

Smiling isn't an essential part of the Lacy technique. If you don't smile naturally and heartily, don't bother. In a public sense that has worked wonders for many salesmen, but if you have ever wondered, and the meat of a sales grasshopper will keep an ant active 3 months

THIS Is LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

We are told that there is a rush of inquiries at the naturalization bureau in the federal building to find out what aliens and students must do in order to be allowed to stay indefinitely in the United States. The idea of becoming a citizen seems to be having a powerful appeal for those aliens who, although they are already in this country, feel the need of regularizing their status as former Austrian or Czechoslovakian citizens by taking the oath of allegiance of the United States.

Robert E. Rogers

For people here by the ordinary processes of immigration under the restricted American policy, I suppose that it is a fairly simple matter to remain, providing the immigrant is careful not to commit a crime involving moral turpitude.

He may indicate his desire to become a citizen as soon as he likes

After five years' residence here he may petition the court to be admitted to citizenship, providing his declaration of intention is two years old. He must be vouched for by two citizens and he must be able to answer elementary questions about our system of government. In practice, seven years is the most likely period of time it takes to become a citizen.

Bars Not Likely To Ever Drop Again

Students and people like actors and actresses, who enter for specific purposes for a limited term, should I imagine, have that term extended if the government of the day wish to remain longer. I should guess also that the government would not be too drastic in sending people who desire to remain over here back to war-torn countries like Spain or dangerous countries like Austria or Czechoslovakia. But as to that no one can be certain how the government will rule.

In spite of the protests of "liberals" who would like to see the immigration barriers thrown down altogether, thus reviving the old policy of the United States to open our country as an asylum for the discontented and unhappy and ambitious of the whole world—there is little probability that such a condition will ever be restored.

That red immigration is now worked feverishly well, in spite of the hordes of aliens we had to assimilate in the last generation before the Great War.

Charity Really Does Begin at Home Now

But to revive that policy today, under post-war European conditions and, equally, post-war American economic and employment conditions, is not to be thought of. The risks are too great. After a century of a liberal immigration policy this country at length decided that charity really does begin at home, that eternal vigilance is the immigration policy is the price of safety.

The rush at the federal bureau undoubtedly comes at this time because numbers of people, finding that the door for a here is pretty well and free from drastic restrictions, have put off from year to year indefining their intentions of becoming citizens taking out their first papers In their ignorance they grew panic-stricken at the thought that perhaps the United States may not allow them to remain here permanently or that they may find themselves officially citizens of a country with which the United States is hereaf ar.

Must Obey Laws, Or Back They Go

I cannot imagine that any citizen of the dictatorship countries or those threatened by the dictatorship countries, such as the little states along the Baltic or in the Balkans, would have any desire to go home so long as they are safe here.

It is a pity that we cannot any longer offer asylum to the Jews of Central or Balkan Europe or other minority groups, but it is perfectly plain that if we attempted that we should find ourselves inundated and submerged by a flood of persecuted people, beyond our ability to assimilate, let alone our ability to support them under what looks to be another long-term depression.

Those far-sighted foreigners who successfully entered our country by legal means before the present crisis broke are lucky, how lucky we old-timers probably can only guess. They are lucky, that is, if they obey our laws. Otherwise it is not impossible that they will find themselves being sent back willy-nilly to that hell of totalitarianism or civil war from which they came.

Pigeons Prove Good Burglars

2 Break Into Malden Bank, Won't Leave

After all, when you've got one of the biggest savings banks in the nation and it has every safety device imaginable and then some, you have been able to break in—well, it's pretty discouraging to open up in the morning and find that the pigeons have accomplished the feat.

That was the situation confronting the Malden Savings Bank today. Master minds were at work but was almost as bad, no one could get the pigeons out.

Although A. George Gilman is president of the bank, is president also of the Massachusetts Savings Bank Association and has solved many tough problems, even he couldn't solve this one.

How the pigeons got in is a mystery and how to get them out was still a puzzler today as they cooed in short flights about the high roof.

Grass-Skirt Battle In Pi Eta Show Stirs Harvard

Will Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., son of the Ambassador to St. James, wear a grass skirt or a marine uniform in Harvard's new Pi Eta show?

This question was the cause of much turmoil in the exclusive Harvard club today as directors weighed the problem. It seemed there were matters of politics and decorum involved.

Dava Gooder, production manager of the new show, a South Sea satire called "Bowgit In Reverse" stood firmly for the marine costume.

"After all," he said, "Joe's father is ambassador to England, so we can't have him bouncing around in a grass skirt, no matter how beautiful a chorine he would be. Think what the King would say when he saw the picture in the papers.

NEUTRAL SKIRT

But Lucien Gilson, sophomore who is pushing the main issue of the show, would not agree.

"To have Joe in a marine outfit would be sure to cause controversy," he said, "I favor the old grass skirt, which is after all a neutral sort of costume—I mean as far as the Government is concerned."

No word of the dispute has yet been sent to Ambassador Kennedy in England, but Jack Kennedy, Harvard sophomore who is convalescing from a case of grippe, stood out for the marine uniform for his brother, with the statement that it would certainly be "much more becoming."

If Joe takes the marine part he will have to do only a walk-on wherein in the chorus he would have to learn the intricate routine. It seemed that for the sake of expediency the eyes would call for the Marines.

Joe himself seemed faintly amused by the whole matter.

"Probably it would be just as well if I didn't take either part," he commented, "I think the public must be getting pretty tired of seeing the Kennedy, Jr mug by this time."

CLEAN UP SCRIPT

Meanwhile another debate of a more serious nature was reported raging behind closed doors. Director Paul Anderson alarmed by comments of Boston ministers that a "drunken missionary scene" in the play was "disgraceful" ordered a clean-up, of sections of the script.

Authors Richard Dorr and Robert Gibson, Harvard graduate students, argued that the "disgraceful" scenes were the high-spot of the show.

But re-writing of some of the dialogue, to make the scenes less offensive, was finally agreed upon, it was learned.

Bay State Order Index In Upturn

Textiles Seen as Factor of Increase

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

It is an old truism that as orders go so does business. And it might be added that the willingness with which business men place orders in anticipation of favorable trade seasons is an exact measure of confidence. With this thought in mind, let's look at the order index of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts.

Back in February, the average Associated business man had every reason to look hopefully toward the spring season. The rapidity of the trade pick-up and the unexpected manner in which purchasing power had been sustained contributed to some rather optimistic spring forecasts. Further, these things were bulwarked by a rather widespread belief concerning prices were making a dependable bottom and were in a good position to work upward. Yet the Associated industries of Massachusetts with one exception showed a decline in orders. The index compiled by Associated Industries managed to climb from 82.9 in January to 84.6 in February, all thanks due to textiles and a miscellaneous group of industries. Leather and shoes of which so much was expected fell more sharply than any other component—from 84.6 to 41.4

• • •

To our own way of looking at the order situation existing in this state which is so heavily dependent on consumers goods industries only one deduction can be made. And it is that no matter how favorable the technical conditions surrounding trade may be that distrust and hard to define feeling of confidence is the iron-fisted dictator of the jigs to come. It was no paper chase a month or two ago and is only now hoped to be made. And the causes are home issues aimed directly with legislative reform fears.

FOREIGN OUTLOOK

The outlook for calmer foreign events is not based entirely on what the fascist nations are likely to do. The democracies are having their troubles and plenty of them. England's is political and concerned with an uncertain policy in regard to the dictators, while France is also up against internal dissention but the political is almost one with financial distress. The former is of great importance but probably of less consequence at this moment than the second. France has a sizable gold fund in terms of dollars, but spending for defense purposes and other emergencies has brought what appears to be severe credit strains.

• • •

The latest weekly statement of the Bank of France shows that it has advanced to the Treasury some 33,700,000,000 francs short of the legal by about 3,500,000,000 francs. The problem now of a harassed treasury is where to obtain fresh funds and the apparent exhausting of other resources, plus the failure to set up a separate defense fund loan, raises the question of raising the legal commercial limit. Is not the step does not seem important but in France it is a confession of financial weakness and would be made a new flight from the franc and a new monetary crisis are unavoidable.

• • •

DOMESTIC MARKETS

In the past three sessions domestic markets portrayed by events on the New York Stock Exchange have produced nothing in the way of tangible evidence as to what is ahead. A volume decline was halted and a feeble rally took place. But prices are still on the border line separating them from a new downtrend. If they are to hold aloof from such a development we still contend that more than a few sessions of trust-busting talk is needed. It is folly to try and read ahead of market action at a time like this and readers are warned against it. Wall is the whirlwind and so if the industrial index is sufficiently well supported to hold above a closing of 118.46.

Market Loses Vigor After Early Upturn

"Discouraged Selling" Blamed

NEW YORK, March 22—What analysts termed "discouraged selling" pulled leading stocks down 1 to 5 points in today's market.

Efforts to give the list an upward push at the start met with meager response and a lower drift soon got under way. Dealings were exceptionally slow on the retreat. Little support was in evidence near the fourth hour.

TAX DISAPPROVAL VOICED

Speculative forces, for some time pinning hopes for a revival of tax revision, remained decidedly chilled when Undersecretary Roswell Magill of the Treasury, testifying before the Senate finance committee, voiced administrative disapproval of most tax changes which had been proposed.

The foreign picture provided scant inspiration for market operations in either way. Trends in markets abroad were indecisive.

Bonds acted a bit better than stocks, but buoyancy was lacking here. Commodities turned in an uneven performance.

Inclined to give ground were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, Sears Roebuck, General Electric, duPont, Standard Oil of N. J., Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, Pullman, Union Carbide, Western Union, J. I. Case, Philip Morris and Johns-Manville.

Utilities exhibited some resistance.

Washington flopped about 6 points at the week's end in trade satisfaction on the concern's first quarter earnings would make as unusually poor showing against profits in the 1937 period.

LOSE COME-BACK VIGOR

American Smelting, Howe Sound and U. S. Smelting, with important holdings in Mexico, rallied as much as 3 points in the morning from their relapse of yesterday on assurances from the Southern Republic's president that expropriation of foreign oil properties would not be extended to other lines of industries. The mining stocks later lost come-back vigor.

Standard Oil company issues were handicapped by official figures disclosing a drop in shipments for February. For the first two months distribution was only about half the aggregate for the corresponding period a year ago.

The financial difficulties of France in her rearmament campaign, and possible subsequent repercussions on world economics, came in for renewed study, as the Caillaux trend an advance from the Bank of France of 5,000,000,000 francs

Free Enterprise System Hopes Heightened

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer

In the West, March 23—Faith and hope in the American free enterprise system are heightened by first hand observation of the speed with which Southern Californians are repairing the great flood damage.

Southern Pacific and Santa Fe are already providing full passenger service and Union Pacific is also getting back to normal.

W. W. Jeffers, able president of the Union Pacific railroad company, believes that the temporary interruption of rail service will dramatize to the public the value of rail transportation which in normal times folks might take for granted like the air which they breathe.

"The disastrous flood conditions," Mr. Jeffers told me, "from which we are slowly emerging in the west, and as a result of which Los Angeles and numerous Southern California and Nevada cities and towns were without transportation or communication for several days, brings home the importance of rail transportation from a public necessity standpoint and it has for many years been recognized from a defense standpoint."

RAIL PROSPECTS IMPROVE

Pointing to ground for hope of better rail prospects, Mr. Jeffers declared:

"Our hopes for a considerable improvement in volume of freight and passenger traffic are to some extent based upon the view that the consumptive necessities have not been supplied for several months past and that the stocks and supplies on hand are in proportion depleted in many lines."

Appraising the rate situation, the Union Pacific chieftain added:

"While the commission's action in the carriers' application for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates was disappointing, the commission was acting for the country as a whole and was careful to take into consideration the whole interests, other than railroads involved.

"The present administration has evidenced a desire to assist the railroads, to cooperate with them and to be sympathetic in working out a solution of railroad problems."

Queried about the significance of the hearings being held by railroads conducted by Senator Wheeler, Mr. Jeffers replied:

"I do not think that there is the facts brought out at the public hearings conducted by Senator Wheeler in the industry which has been the subject of probably the most legislation and regulation of any. New legislation if enacted, should be designed to enable carriers to effect reorganizations along natural lines. What the railroads need is a friendly and helpful attitude on the part of the regulatory bodies."

ON TAXES, SOCIAL SECURITY

Chatting about tax problems and social security costs, Mr. Jeffers who has been supervising repairs of railroads serving Los Angeles, said:

"While the tax burden upon the railroads, as upon other industry, is susceptible of reduction only to the extent that reductions can be effected in governmental expenses. The railroads have not, to my knowledge, sought any more favorable treatment in this respect than is accorded other industry, but they do seek an equal treatment and the same opportunity to sell their services as other industries enjoy.

"While the present pension plan under the railroad retirement act is not, in my opinion, the final plan, it nevertheless had the approval of labor organizations and general management in joint conference.

"The unemployment insurance plan is a contribution to the social order of the day, one with which we have had insufficient experience upon which to pass judgment."

Base Metal Prices In Narrow Range

NEW YORK, March 22 (INS)—Early trade in base metals today was slow with prices moving narrowly.

Export copper was reported sold in the domestic market at 9.35 cents a pound c. f. European base ports against a range of 9.00 cents to 10 cents a week ago. Volume was the turnover was about 2500 tons.

Domestic copper continued at 10 cents a pound valley base delivered.

Zinc and lead remained at prevailing levels.

Never-Never Land; Or the 'Golden Era' of Sport

WE ARE READING A GOOD DEAL about the Golden Era of Sport—the athletic decade of Jack Dempsey, Bill Tilden, Bobby Jones, Knute Rockne, Red Grange, Babe Ruth, Reggie McNamara, Helen Wills, Man O' War, Earle Sande and others. Some call it the Twinkling '20s, or the age of Wonderful Nonsense. Yet I wonder whether we who chronicle the sport page heroes and their female counterparts, are not trapped by fond recollections, and whether tomorrow's historians will be typing, in their turn, the glories of our current Greats—Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig, Don Budge, Joe Louis, Eddie Shore, Sonja Henie, Glenn Cunningham, Henry Armstrong, Clint Frank, Sammy Baugh, Dizzy Dean, Helen Jacobs, War Admiral, Sam Snead and Babe Didrickson. They're good, too.

AUSTEN LAKE

An era is golden only in retrospect. I don't think we sport writers were conscious that the '20's were golden until long after they were over. Because I can recall how the authors blew razzberries at Bill Tilden and Jack Dempsey when you and I were young Maggie. The late W. O. McGeehan, a magnificent long distance hater, wrote columns of clever calumny about Jack. Others blistered Grange and said that Britton, his interfering fullback, had been the secret of his college success. Tilden was termed an over-stuffed silk shirt. Even Babe Ruth had his quota of belittlers.

Night Life Under A Cuban Moon | Rhumba Palace, Sans Souci

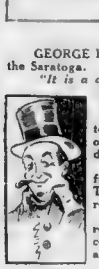
By JACK CONWAY

HAVANA, Cuba, March 22.

GEORGE Heustis suggested that we have dinner at the Saratoga.

"It is a distinctive type of sidewalk cafe," said George. "You will like the Cuban orchestra and the Spanish singer."



Mr. Boston

Jesus Hernandez drove us to the Saratoga, and we secured a table near the part of the sidewalk used by pedestrians and directly opposite the orchestra.

Two Cuban urchins came running from the street, and came to our table. They asked for pennies, and when they received them they left.

I ordered fruit juice, vegetable soup, red snapper, potatoes, beets, ice cream and coffee. The dinner was listed on the menu at $1.25.

I found the food good, and the Cuban orchestra excellent.

"Wait until you hear the Spanish girl sing," advised Heustis.

The orchestra started playing a lively Spanish air. A girl of about 16 years old stood up, and started to sing.

People gathered in the square to listen to the young singer. Spanish words poured out of her mouth. Her Spanish accent was clear, her voice perfect.

The girl looked beautiful as she stood up in front of the orchestra singing as if that was the only interest she had in life.

The girl lacked the color and expression we like in our American singers. Perhaps some American director will have dinner at the Saratoga some night, and will sign the Spanish girl to a Hollywood contract. If he does, he will certainly employ a teacher to instruct her in personality.

Spanish girls have exceptional beauty and charm, but they lack the bubbling personality of American girls.

The only disturbing thing connected with our dinner was the fact a member of the Cuban national police kept patrolling that section of the sidewalk directly behind where my table was located. Nobody was permitted to linger on the sidewalk.

The recent shootings in Cuba have created an air of tension in Havana. Almost every place you go you see members of the national police and soldiers on duty. People are compelled to keep moving, and groups are quickly dispersed.

A Cuban song or a rhumba dancer make you forget about this tension that is so great under the surface of Havana.

George Heustis talked so much about the Rhumba Palace that I was anxious to see it, but it was only 9:30 p. m., and things don't begin to get hot at the Rhumba Palace until 11 p. m. So we decided to do some shopping.

Most of the stores in Cuba keep open at night so as to get the tourist trade. I was told it is best to make one's purchases at the high class stores, and then you at least get what you pay for. The bargain hunters in Havana usually end up with inferior qualities in merchandise.

When you visit many of the shops in Havana, the owner immediately serves you a daiquiri. Nobody appears to be in a hurry. Experience has probably taught these thrift shop keepers that a few daiquiris put the prospective customer into a buying mood.

We made our purchases, and at 11 p. m. were seated at the ringside table at the Rhumba Palace.

Youth and the Carefree Rhumba

THERE IS a touch of the Bohemian in these Rhumba Palaces. The people at the different tables all talk to each other, while the entertainers will step over in any table where people applaud them and pour them across a drink of rum.

I can't say whether to determine just how much it keeps count of the drinks that are consumed. At the Rhumba Palace and most other bright spots in Havana, the waiter first places a bottle of rum on the table.

The patrons can then make their own drinks, or take them straight as they wish. The waiter keeps no check on the number of drinks taken from the bottle, but a dapper

Social Leaders Gather at Sans Souci

IT WAS midnight when we left the Rhumba Palace, and the next stop at Sans Souci would go on at 12:30.

Sans Souci is the show place among the night spots of Havana. It is where the social leaders gather, for their parties, and everything there is conducted on a lofty scale.

The dance floor is set out under the bright tropical moon and stars. It is surrounded by palm trees and other tropical trees. The tables for the patrons are placed in this marvelous tropical setting.

The place is saturated with the magical romance of the tropics.

There is a consumption minimum per persona $2. Translated, this means there is a minimum charge of $2 a person. You can get food if you wish it, but nobody cares for food, as most persons who visit Sans Souci go there for the show, to dance, and to drink fine Napoleon 80-year old brandies. This 80-year-old brandy costs $1 a drink against 75 cents for a Manhattan or a daiquiri.

High balls with ginger ale cost 90 cents. An absinthe frappe sells for 80 cents, while a mint julep is 75 cents. Sherries and ports are 75 cents a drink.

A minute steak costs $1.75, peache melba desert 90 cents, while a lobster thermidor sells for $1.50, chicken salad $1.25, while onion soup au gratin is 50 cents. The other food prices are much the same as they are in our better Boston hotels.

The romance at Sans Souci is not entirely around the tables under the palm trees. If you get restless you can take a walk through magnificent tropical gardens, where the lights over the dance floor don't shed their rays.

In the event of rain Sans Souci can move its entire show indoors [illegible] during the winter months. It will often go for 60 days without even a shower.

There is also a gambling casino at Sans Souci. You can play any gambling game from roulette to dice. There is a million dollar setting for the casino, and social leaders and tourists were trying their fortunes in the game.

The show at Sans Souci was a good one with an American dance team performing most of the applause. It was pleasant to watch two graceful American dancers after seeing so many rhumba dancers.

It was announced there would be another show at 4 a. m. This announcement brought applause from the assembled guests.

My driver was waiting outside and I had him called and we were soon back in our hotel.

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American Mr. Boston will describe racing and gambling in Havana.

Adams Opposes Change of Dog, Horse Laws

By Associated Press

An assertion that any attempt to remove the horse and dog racing laws from the Massachusetts statutes was "a useless gesture a la prohibition" today came from Charles F. Adams, chairman of the Eastern Racing Association, which operates Suffolk Downs horse track.

"Don't throw away a valuable source of revenue," he told the legal affairs committee before which he appeared in opposition to a House petition generally designed to increase the state's profits from pari-mutuel horse and dog track betting.

State Representative Joseph A. Milano (D.) of Melrose sponsor of several of the petitions, urged their passage to balance the "relief load to welfare departments which is directly attributable to the dog and horse tracks."

LEAVE LAW ALONE.

Robert J. Bottomly, representing the Old Harbor dog track, declared racing interests would welcome an impartial investigation" of their books, and added, "I think you ought to leave the racing law alone until you find out if the people are going to vote it out."

Three measures proposed payment to the state of unclaimed awards on winning horses and dogs. Adams contended the money had been set aside in a special fund, and doubted that the state could confiscate it legally.

Another measure called for standardization of license fees and still another urged the state to retain the "breakage" on winning bets, now evenly divided between the state and the tracks.

Galuszka Back With Jumbos

Al Galuszka, Tufts pitching ace who led the Jumbos on the mound the greater part of last season, held his first workout in the cage of the Cousens gymnasium.

Galuszka, who broke his ankle while co-captaining basketball six weeks ago, has just had the cast removed, and he is taking light workouts daily to strengthen the leg muscles. As yet he is just able to stand in one spot and throw easily, but he is expected to regain his old-time skill as he regains his confidence in the weakened limb.

Coach Ken Nash has a good pitching squad with which to work this year, including veterans Tony Wolyj and Jack Hughes, besides Al Hatch and Steve Lemerigian who showed for the yearlings last spring. Al Roopinian, an outfielder, is hurling some fancy curves and hooks, and will be used on the mound if he can control the ball.

Wayne Penman and Fran Mages are vieing for first base honors, with Parmen the favorite, as Mages is a good outfielder and a good batter. Captain Bennie Collier is holding his own at second, with Harold Wood the only sure outfielder.

Joe Weeks, veteran from last year, will act as backstop, and he is expected to regain the high batting average he held all through both junior and freshman years.

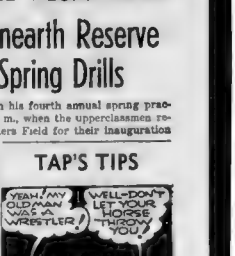
TAP'S TIPS



4 Jockeys Hurt At Tropical

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 22 (INS)—Four jockeys went down with their mounts in the worst spill of the season which occurred in the eighth and final race on the Monday program here.

Two of the riders, Jockeys Jaskie and Wimmer, were sent to a hospital.

Jaskie who rode Fidelia, suffered a broken leg, and Wimmer, who had the mount on Genabi, received a fractured cheekbone.

The other two riders, Simmons, who had the leg up on Runamuck, and Hacker, who piloted Starwick, escaped with nothing more severe than a shaking up, a cursory examination revealed.

The spill occurred in the latter stages of the race at a sixteenth conte t. All four horses involved were unsaffled, the spill, therefore, not affecting eight others in front of them.

None of the horses suffered to any appreciable extent from the experience.

Bull Montana Lost Rake Duel

Strong Man of Films Lands in Court

HOLLYWOOD, March 22 (INS)—Bull Montana, ex-wrester and film strong man was back raking leaves today, negotiating the "battle of the rakes" and its consequences.

Bull told court officers he was peacefully raking leaves in his yard when his neighbor, Roy Boeger, fell him he'd better not burn the leaves in Boeger's incinerator. Bull said he hadn't intended to, but when Boeger said:

"Be sure you don't," Bull said, "I can if I want to."

The over-the-fence duel continued, Bull explained, with Boeger leaping over the fence and taking a few swipes at the strong man, using his bamboo rake as a weapon. Bull got a wound in the hand.

From this point the argument went to police court, where City Prosecutor Ray Hall called it a draw an ordered the men to shake hands and go back to raking their leaves.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

When Jack Oakie squares away for his "Caravan" coast to coasting (WEEI) at 9:30 tonight, he will have Milton Berle for a funmaking side-kick.

Said hour, meaning until 9:30, also finds Beatrice Lillie holding forth through the 10 and 10.30 second half, leading her vivacity to the swing session of Benny Goodman and his tune troupe.

"N F T"

All manner of rumors have been around concerning the return to regular radio duty by Milton Berle, but nothing to be verified by way of official release. One has been to the effect that Milt is in line for the vacation to the sponsorship Fates Chester is leaving this week when he switches from gasoline to refreshments for his barking. How true it is nobody seems to know, but the Chesterfield will be a period for a while. Can't say as I blame it, the current series has been a highly respected harbinger of Spring that is duly credited everywhere.

STAR OF SILENT SCREEN

William S. Hart, cowboy hero of speechless films, will discuss his plans for a motion picture "comeback" when he appears as George McCall's guest on "Hollywood Screenscoops" this evening (WEEI) from 7.15 to 7.30.

McCall recently made known the fact that Hart was being considered for a role in a picture soon to be filmed, and queried Screenscoop listeners as to whether they remembered the Western star of a decade ago.

Skeptical producers were hesitant about casting the retired movie idol, though he's a big attraction. But the mail letters convinced Metal of Bill Hart's continued popularity throughout the nation.

He immediately signed the wire to tell the air audience about his future plans.

Hart turned his attention from the legitimate to the cinema stage in 1914 and starred in numerous successful productions, including "Square Deal Sanderson," "Wagon Tracks" "Sand," "White Oak" and "Tumbleweed," although "The Return of Draw Egan" made the eager young eyes of this typewriter tapper pop more than any of them.

Sees Business Trend Now to Decentralize

Forbes Cites Firms Which Are Moving Managements

By B. C. FORBES

I have had a long talk with a man who took hold of a running down business a few years ago and who has achieved very notable results. Elderly aristocrats had previously been in command.

Here is one pointer:

"You cannot successfully run a far-flung business, spending your time in an office in New York or Chicago or Boston or any other big city. You must not only visit but study operations on the ground, wherever you have important interests.

"You must not only know things for yourself, but you must know your men. The best way to size a man up is to watch him at work, especially to watch how he handles people.

Another of his keys to accomplishment:

"After you have carefully picked a man for any kind of executive or managerial duties, give him freedom commensurate with his responsibilities. Give him scope, elbow-room.

"Trust him—and let him know that you will continue to trust him as long as he operates satisfactorily, as long as he gets results without getting the company into trouble, into trouble with local authorities, local people, local employes."

Unlike certain Washingtonian leaders, he believes that administration can easily become far too greatly concentrated, that no one man or small group of men, located in one city, can possibly attain as fruitful results as can be attained through decentralization of authority and administration.

* * *

The United States Steel Corporation has lately been acting on that principle. Headquarters of its president and other operators were recently transferred from New York to Pittsburgh.

General Motors inaugurated a similar policy quite some time ago. Time was when practically everything of importance was handled by top executives in New York. Although even then regular visits were paid to Detroit and other producing centers by chief executives.

While Chairman A. P. Sloan still is nominally located in New York, he is constantly out on the firing line. As for President Knudsen, as well as several other higher ups, their headquarters are Detroit.

The other day, President L. A. Downer, Illinois Central, announced that headquarters of the directorate would be moved from New York to Chicago. More and more of the directors are to be drawn from the territory in which the road operates.

Chairman W. A. Harriman (son of E. H. Harriman) declares that there has been too much concentration of industrial control in New York and that the direction of business companies should, as far as possible, be transferred to the east of their operations.

* * *

It has been found that the closer a management is to its enterprise, the better the opportunity for establishing friendly relationships.

The removal of corporation headquarters from New York is being brought about by another considerable factor. "Financial control," so called "Wall Street control," of big corporations is on the wane. "Banker management" has fallen into disfavor. Nor are recent revelations at Washington concerning buggy-buggery perpetrated by financial interests in the railway world likely to stay their trend.

Results of this evolution promise to be salutary socially, financially, laborwise, politically.

Roper Sees Upturn In Business Near

Five Industrial Leaders Share His Views on Radio Symposium

NEW YORK, March 22 (INS)—Evidences that a spring upturn in business and industry is in the offing were noted today by Secretary of Commerce Roper and five out of nine national business leaders who joined in a radio symposium broadcast over a coast-to-coast NBC network.

Business leaders professing to see signs of recovery were Morris W. Ilaft, of the National Cloak and Suit Recovery Board; Alvan MacAuley, president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association; Joseph M Schenck, president of the Motion Picture Producers; Axtell J. Byles, president of the American Petroleum Institute, and Dr. John F Anderson, president of the American Drug Manufacturers Association.

DOUBT EARLY GAIN

Tom M. Girdler, president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, made a qualified prediction of business recovery, saying it was dependent on future developments.

Paul S. Willis, president of the Associated Grocery Manufacturers, declared recovery was not an immediate prospect.

Edwin S. Friendly, chairman of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association's Bureau of Advertising, said an upturn is likely only is certain conditions are met.

J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, asserted he could see no definite indications of recovery in the immediate future.

Secretary Roper said:

"There is evidence of resistance to further business and economic decline, indicating that the liquidation period has about subsided.

"While an immediate dynamic upturn is not to be expected, yet factors that now stimulate confidence, coupled with seasonal influences, should augment the rate of activity during the ensuing months.

SEES AN UPSWING

"In many instances, inventories have reached the points of bare subsistence and must be replenished to meet accumulated consummer need."

Roper said increased production is already to be noted in the automobile and textile industries as well as the industries affected by housing programs, and that this gives promise of wider employment.

He alluded to the administration's reciprocal trade treaty policy as a factor enlarging the volume of commerce with other nations, saying:

"The reduction of trade barriers under these agreements will stimulate the volume of purchases of our raw materials and manufactured products in countries that are now in real need of them and thus promote world security and international peace."

How Foreign Conditions Affect Us

Honey Finds We Depend Much on Alien Trade

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, March 22—Last week's business news was decidedly dominated by foreign affairs. In brief summary, we note that at the beginning of the week we learned that Germany had annexed Austria. Then came reports that the Fascist cause was about to win in Spain, and that France might become involved in order to protect her southern border and her connections with her colony in Algiers. Finally, the demands made on little Lithuania by Poland, caused alarm.

In the midst of all this, France was torn by the internal struggle between her "haves" and "have nots." And the London stock market cracked as British policy wavered, and business in England showed signs f growing recession.

As has been pointed out several times indicated in this column, the bearing of foreign conditions upon our domestic business is not to be forgotten or taken lightly. It may be well, however, to note some of the more important ways that we are affected.

IMPORTS NEEDED

First, probably, we should note that we depend upon foreign trade to an important extent. We have to get from abroad manganese, nickel, tin, rubber, sugar, coffee, and silk. We require foreign markets for our surplus of cotton, machinery, and automobiles.

Second, I would point the practical impossibility of financial stability while foreign conditions are unsettled. It would be extremely difficult to maintain our currency on a gold standard while other leading nations were "managing" their currencies. We are likely to have violent movements of "hot money" into and out of the country, with much disturbance of security market.

Third, the large production of armament and munitions of war is bound to mean waste and inflation.

Fourth, numerous public and private investments abroad are endangered. The normal flow of international investment and interest payments is interfered with.

Finally, the American standard of living" would be utterly impossible without reliance upon imports and corresponding foreign products, and the profitable export of many things we make. Such exchange of goods enables us to live much cheaper and better than we could without it.

Most economists agree that we will never have a complete return to prosperity until our foreign trade is restored to normal. We can have a spell of "rearmament boom" by using government credit lavishly to throw money into circulation, however, there would be little or nothing to show for it. Only real international trade would induce us to go down that road.

TWO TRUTHS

Here at home two general truths about business have become fairly clear. One is that business is so bad that it can hardly be far from bottom. The other is that important gains for eventual recovery are being laid.

For example, with the steel industry at about 30 per cent of capacity, and automobile companies making only about three cars a week—all this in the spring season!—how much lower are we likely to go?

On the other hand, the attitude of the U. S. Senate toward relieving business fears may become fairly most encouraging. Congress is, at last, clearly showing a realization that business recovery must come before reform.

This will go far to establish a basis for business men to begin to hope for investment, which would bring along employment for both labor and capital.

More positively, we note that things are shaping up for more of a gain in building activity under the federal housing act of 1938 than seemed probable a short time ago. And the steps are being bound to awaken the nation to the folly of putting a democratic government in the hand of any business politics and business are two different games.

"I was looking for Creepy?" Allenby said.

"Dunno where he is sir. He might be down by da boathouse. Da's where he lives."

"How did he make out with the gals last night?"

"Pretty good, sir. Knocked off three of de ugly pests. He's mighty handy with a gun, Creepy. Da's dey Indian in him."

"Where was he shooting?"

"Right over dere, sir. The gardener indicated with a spatulate fore-finger.

"Yonder, by de hen house by de ol' slave quarters. Dere's a whole lot of holes 'round dere."

It required a comparatively short time for Roger Allenby to ascertain what he wanted and soon he was hurrying back to the living room, the richer by one bullet dug from the henhouse's coral wall.

"Morning, Major," Ward greeted him in the hall. "You're up early. When he noticed the bandage he started.

"Good Lord, what's happened to you?"

A WHITE LIE

Allenby managed a convincing, shamefaced grin.

"Clumsy bit of work. Slipped getting out of the bathtub and whanged my head against the wash basin. The wash basin won."

"Looks like it," Ward sympathized.

"Most bathrooms are regular mantraps. Fellow I knew in China was a pilot in the war, knocked off 11 of the Hun planes the night day he slipped like you must have—broke his neck in a bathtub."

"What kind of a break was it?"

"Oh, a simple fracture of the Atlas vertebra."

"Sounds very unpleasant. Is Grafton up yet?"

"If he is, I haven't heard a peep out of him."

Ward stepped closer and inquired in an undertone:

"What do you make of Terry James?"

"Don't know."

Allenby was deceptively incurious.

"What do you mean?"

"He's supposed to figure in our deal in a small way—but even so I don't see how anyone around isn't on the level."

Ward paused, frowning on the amber overbath of sunlight creating in from a nearby window.

"I saw him come in last night pretty late."

"Did you?"

"Yes. He'd been talking and quarreling with Barbara, his sister, where I couldn't help hearing them. Sounded as if the row was over money."

"Then Terry isn't as well off as his sister?"

Ward's teeth glistened to his rather boyish smile.

"Not by a long shot! The James inherited plenty of blue blood, but very few yellow dollars. Barbara got her money through Winslow, her first husband. He was killed in an auto smash just a few months after Peter was born—so Barney tells me. Remarkable woman, Barbara." Ward mused, peering out on the placid waters of Castle Harbour.

"She's one of those people who are so goody-good that it hurts. Means all right, like the kid who loaded his father's gun on the Q. T. I say, have you noticed the cold shoulder she's got for young Gibbons?"

WARD EXPLAINS

"Why, yes," Allenby admitted. "What seems to be the trouble?"

"I can tell you," the other said with sudden bitterness in his tone. "She doesn't want a plain, self-made man in the family—only aristocracy. Just because young Gibbons has come up from scratch, she—she—she can't see him for dust.

"I'm crazy over Gail myself," he admitted in a sudden burst of confidence, "but I wouldn't mind losing out to a real guy like young Gibbons. I know what it is to start from nothing and kick the world in the pants until it gives you what you want."

"How does Gail feel about it?"

"She's a queer kid; doesn't open up much—at least not to me," Ward confessed.

"Take a look at that mouth of hers; it gets a pretty hard expression sometimes. I don't think she realizes it, either. Maybe her stepdad's butting in, telling her who is eligible and who isn't."

Ward knew why doesn't Gail tell Mrs. Grafton to run along and roll her hoop?"

"Can't," Ward grunted.

"Ever notice, Major, that money's pretty important in this life? Gail knows Barney's up to his ears in this Rio Loja deal and—"

"Hi, there, Euck!"

From the top of the steps Gail waved them a gay greeting.

"Come in and have some breakfast. We'll let the slowpokes show up as they please."

When Allenby stepped into sight on the patio of her bungalow the touch a little cedarwood broom at the throat of her dress.

"Major, wha—what's happened?"

Resigned to repeating his fabrication, Allenby, before offered the lathtub explanation, then dismissed the subject as quickly as he could.

But was it natural for Gail to go so deathly white over a patch of court-plaster? Was an impressionable girl—might, but still—

In the distance a motorboat's exhaust was muttering louder and louder. Frowning, Allenby glanced at his watch. Could this be Inspector Boyd already? It was only half-past eight.

A MYSTERY PACKAGE!

Gail, following his look, smiled.

"Oh, that'll be Creepy bringing over the mail. He didn't go over last night. The Dart needed overhauling."

Ward was obviously hungry.

"Come on, Major. My stomach's phoning up to see if my throat's cut. I could eat my weight in wheat cakes."

By executing a quiet retreat into the library, Allenby was strategically located to inspect the mail when it first was brought in from the servant's wing.

This small package gave MAJOR ALLENBY a bad jolt . . .

Clip the Camera Clues

Half expecting some communication from Bailey of the Inter-Ocean and not wishing such a letterhead to be noted, he resigned himself to the patience.

Once a neat mulatto maid had brought in a pile of mail and they retreated to the lanai for a bad jolt.

THERE SERENELY REPOSING AMONGST A MOUND OF LETTERS LAY A SMALL PACKAGE.

In open-mouth astonishment he gazed at the parcel. Knowing that the package bore local postage, the elaborate structure his imagination had reared crashed down about his ears.

Almost savagely he pocketed the little parcel as he sent in to breakfast and endured as best he might the curiosity and sympathy of his fellow guests.

Only Sue alone remained unsisturbed.

"Oh, Major, you look like the hero of a Civil War romance. That bandage gives just the right touch."

She leaned far over the table.

"You don't need a nurse, do you?"

"I certainly do need a nurse—or maybe it's a keeper," Allenby growled.

On running his eyes around the breakfast table he found two faces particularly interesting. Barney Grafton seemed nervous and was attempting a jovial air without noticeable success.

As for Barbara Grafton, her eyes were so dull and heavy and her mouth set in such a drawn line it seemed as if she could have slept very little.

New York Curb

Selling Pressure Cancels Gains

NEW YORK, March 22 (AP)—The curb market lost early gains today as selling pressure developed over a wide front in late trading.

Losers of major fractions to a point or more around the final hour included Newmont Mining, Aluminum Co., Gulf Oil, Pittsburgh Glass and Sherwin Williams Babcock & Wilcox jumped around 6 on moderate turnover. American Gas & Electric dropped nearly a point while most utilities chalked up fractional losses.

Student Lane Shop

PAUL V. DUNPHY JAY ENGEL

Paul V. Dunphy, display manager of the Bond Stores in Boston, agrees with Jay Engel, district supervisor, that the new shop will have the right appeal for the "young man who shoots up like a reed."

An innovation in the manufacture and selling of student clothing made exactly like the suits fashioned for men was announced today by Bond Stores, 618 Washington street.

These suits mark the introduction to the American market of the new brand of Student Lane Clothes.

According to Bond officials, the suits will be designed especially for the young man who "shoots up like a reed" in his growing years. The suits are fitted in slim sizes.

SHORTS, HUSKIES, TOO

Shorts and huskies for the boys and young men who unexpectedly branch out in width and girth are also features of this new plan in student clothes.

The same details of tailoring, the same sturdy linings, the same strong thread, the same long-wearing woolens that are found in Bond's men's clothing will prevail in Student Lane Clothes, it was stated.

NEW SHOP OPENING

Announcement of the new shop's opening was made by Mr. Jay Engel, district supervisor for a number of eastern units in the corporation. Mr. Engel also announced that the shop has been constructed by Mr. Paul V. Dunphy, a Boston resident who is display manager of the local unit.

Mr. Engel declared that 1500 garments will be accomodated in the shop, the opening of which will be announced shortly in the newspapers.

Bond's will present to each customer during the opening days a special wearable gift.

Direct 'Open House'

R. T. BEERS — PRICE FERDINAND — RUSSELL R. CAMERON

R. T. Beers, merchandise manager, Price Ferdinand, treasurer, and Russell R. Cameron, president and general manager, who are directing "open house" week at the Frank Ferdinand, Inc., furniture store located at Dudley street terminal.

Remodeled throughout, the 68-year-old Frank Ferdinand, Inc., one of Boston's largest and oldest furniture concerns, is holding open house this week, that everyone may view this completely modernized establishment.

Covering five acres of floor space, the Ferdinand store, located at Dudley street terminal, is now larger than at any time in its history for the display of choice merchandise, many nooks and walls having been eliminated.

A feature of the new display is a seven-room Colonial suite on the third floor, with the furniture entirely of maple in a finish that faithfully reproduces the maple furniture of Colonial days. All rugs in the suits are soft-toned Colonial type hooked designs.

Five of the building's seven floors are devoted to the office and various furniture and accessory displays, with the sixth and seventh floors given over to warehouse needs.

As part of the open house program, there will be an organ recital and singing by the Lotus Male Quartet on Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings this week.

The store was founded in 1869 by Frank Ferdinand and has been continuously operated by succeeding members of the Ferdinand family since that time, maintaining New England standards of dependable merchandise and fair dealing to patrons through more than three generations.

Russell R. Cameron, well-known merchant of Harvard square, Cambridge, came to Ferdinand's in May, 1935, as president and general manager and is continuing the tradition of the noted establishment.

John Booth's Kin On Honeymoon

KEENE, N. H., March 25—David B. Putnam, 25, of Keene, and the former Miss Rosamond Castle Page, great-granddaughter of John Wilkes Booth, who assassinated Abraham Lincoln, today were honeymooning in Europe.

Miss Page's parents disclosed the couple were married here last Thursday. The couple sailed from New York Friday night. Putnam operates a machine shop here with his father.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

TUESDAY, MARCH 22, 1938

Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up.—I Corinthians XIII., 4.

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Leslie C. Nichols, Universalist Church, Melrose. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. Palfrey Perkins, King's Chapel, Boston

The Editor Says:

THE Legislature of the State of New York has wisely and patriotically passed a bill to prohibit the appointment of ANY Communists to ANY public office or position in ANY branch of the city, county or State governments.

The bill was sponsored in the Legislature by Senator John J. McNaboe, of New York City, whose public duties have made him thoroughly familiar with the tactics, the organization, the foreign allegiance, the hypocrisy and the subversive doctrines and un-American practices of the Communist party.

"I hope to accomplish this," Senator McNaboe told the State Senate, "that no more appointments to Civil Service positions shall be made of Communists or persons who advocate overthrow of our form of government by violence,

Both Houses of the Legislature sustained the bill overwhelmingly.

Thirty-nine Senators voted for the bill and only three against it.

In the Assembly the vote was 110 for the bill and twenty-three against.

THE OVERWHELMING VOTE in the Legislature constitutes a severe chastisement of Manhattan Borough President Stanley Isaacs for appointing a Communist to a place in his department.

Isaacs himself was not elected as a Communist. He was elected as a Republican-Fusion nominee.

And yet—with more than two hundred thousand jobless persons on the relief rolls of his city—he had to appoint a COMMUNIST to one of the payroll jobs at his disposal; he had to put a PROFESSIONAL COMMUNIST PROPAGANDIST, an OFFICIAL OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY, and thus A SUBORDINATE OF THE COMINTERN, into a position by which the Borough President's office, supported by AMERICAN taxpayers, could be used as an agency for promoting RUSSIAN Communism.

And the appointment shocked and outraged public opinion in New York—to what extent, the Legislature has most conclusively shown.

TWO THINGS NOW REMAIN to be done. Borough President Isaacs should bow to the Legislature's rebuke and GET RID of his Communist appointee.

And Governor Lehman should SIGN the McNaboe bill and MAKE IT LAW.

True, the Governor refused to remove Isaacs from his elective office because existing law did not warrant.

But that implied no sympathy with Communism.

In 1935, the Governor approvingly signed a teachers' oath of loyalty law to keep COMMUNISTS out of the schools.

In an address last January before the New York State Legislature, he warned against any encroachment of Communism in public office.

Asserting that Communism, like Fascism, is "completely destructive of democracy," the Governor said:

"The changes in government which have led to dictatorship abroad were, in many instances, at first hardly perceptible.

"It is therefore just as important to guard against GRADUAL INSIDIOUS CHANGE that attacks the roots of democracy as against REVOLUTION ITSELF."

Obviously, therefore, Governor Lehman can, with entire freedom of conscience, approve the McNaboe Bill to keep Communists out of government—for certainly, nothing can be more insidious than to put COMMUNISTS into the very government which COMMUNISM seeks to destroy.

WRITE, PRAY AND HOPE!

"Condemned in more than a million words of testimony, hearings on the proposed British trade pact today neared their end in Washington."—News Item.

Thus the threat to New England jobs and wages becomes more fearsome.

Secretary Hull, arrogant in his determination to negotiate this "free trade" treaty with Great Britain, has given this part of the country no encouragement.

Arguments that our wages would have to be reduced to the low level of Europe's if the tariff protection is destroyed have fallen on deaf ears.

From an Administration that was elected to raise the American standard of living has come not a single cheerful word.

One might almost think that the host of big-salaried bureaucrats in Washington wish us to be forced down to the deplorable condition of European and Asiatic labor.

OUR SOLE HOPE now is that President Roosevelt, who can stop Mr. Hull in two minutes, will scrap this ruinous treaty and save New England.

The letters and telegrams that thousands of men and women in Boston, Lawrence, Haverhill and other cities have sent to the White House may help.

So may the thousands of additional protests that will be made in the next few days.

We can only pray and continue to WRITE THE LETTERS that, if this is still a government OF THE PEOPLE and FOR THE PEOPLE, will prevent the closing of factories and the destruction of our jobs and wages.

Red Brotherhood

By T. E. Powers

Despite what the Communist Party now pretends, the whole brutal creed of Marxian Communism demands the violent overthrow of our Government and the establishment of a "dictatorship of the proletariat."

These Communists actually have a "dictatorship of the proletariat" ready made, waiting for them, whence came this despatch:

"The eighteen defendants sentenced to death in the latest purge trial of Soviet Russia have been executed."

Those "defendants" were all Communists, and makers of the Red Revolution.

Maybe that explains why our alien Red revolutionists do not want to be deported to Russia — their model country!

SNAPSHOTS AT RANDOM: On narrow Pell street you climb up a flight of rickety steps to a Chinese restaurant, which makes little fuss about its excellent dishes . . . Well-dressed young Chinese, chattering madly in sing-song patois, stare up at each newcomer and then chop-stick their way through stingy viands . . . Tea sells from a slim dime to a fin the pot . . . You fork over $5 for the leaves "grown on the sun-kissed tops of the highest mountain peaks" . . . The proprietor explains . . . "You takee leaves . . . oop . . . tree she die . . . no more tree, but okay tea" . . .

In the glorified dram-shop known as Casa Manana, a sombre-eyed gentleman, puffing at the end of a long cigarette holder, stares gloomily at a capering nude toying with a huge balloon . . . Impresario Billy Rose, rushing down front to greet a friend, finds no seat, and settles serenely on the lap of Will Hays, cinema monarch . . .

Edwin C. Hill and Jack Dempsey huddle gloomily over the elegant bar of the ex-champion's new Broadway groggery . . . It occurs to us, as we pass the statue of Horace Greeley, who urged youth to "Go West," that his bronze figure — just below Herald Square — faces North!

Tall, broad-shouldered Paul Gallico, roaming reporter and fictionist, steps daintily on the Stork Club floor with a cute partner but Playwright George S. Kaufman grimly studies the ceiling . . . Have rarely seen him unbend in public places . . .

Operatic Thrush Lily Pons and her frequent escort, Andre Kostelanetz, entering La Conga, waver uncertainly, and then pass by the table where Poet-Wit Dorothy Parker is busy chattering to Producer Hunt Stromberg, proceeding until they find a secluded table in the farthermost reach of the room . . . Raucous rendezvous in Harlem is Dickie Wells' . . . Here shuffling couples cluster on the tiny dance patch like black grapes on a platter in the hands of a nervous maid . . .

Infrequent stroller along Broadway, William Faversham studies the photographs of the cast of "Julius Caesar" in front of the Mercury Theater—perhaps recalling, when in the role of Anthony, he used to lift the galleries with the funeral oration . . . The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Sometimes a girl can hardly wait to marry a man in order to "take the conceit out of him."

At least, that's the way it looks to the rest of the world.

But taking the conceit out of a man, like taking the vanity out of a woman, is about the cruelest and most foolish thing you can do.

For, while conceit may be the cause of many of a man's follies, it is the source of most of his achievements.

Rob a man of his money, his friends or his dearest wish—but leave him his sacred SELF-ESTEEM!

For, so long as there is a spark of it left, there is hope for him.

Without it, he is as ineffective as a dog's tail which has lost its wag, or a clock without a tick.

It is through his conceit that many a woman has flattered a man into doing big things and making a success of himself.

Just as a small boy loves to visualize himself as Dead-Eye Dick or Big-Chief-Red-Feather, a man likes to visualize himself as a Napoleon of Finance, a great political leader or a deep and brilliant thinker.

And the more his wife helps him to hold onto this vision, the surer he is of becoming the thing he thinks he is.

Nagging, "reasoning" and coercion will roll right off the average man like water off a gabled roof; whereas a little flattery at the right moment will spur him on to do or be anything a woman wants him to be.

It is his vanity that prompts him to cultivate the arts and graces, and inspires him to keep the polish on his boots and his manners, so that he may look prosperous.

It is his vanity and self-esteem that drive him on to hard work and achievement, so that he may be a success in the eyes of the world.

His vanity may even make him scrupulous about keeping his word and paying his bills, so that he may not be called a "four-flusher."

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE Sino-Japanese war may cut off the supply of ma huang, the Chinese grass used to compound ephedrin, which is used for treatment of asthma. It is an invaluable drug which has been effectively used by the Chinese for centuries. Now importers are turning to Persia for a fresh supply.

At the government experimental farm at Arlington, Va., one may see any number of Chinese herbs and grasses. American medicine has been greatly benefited by these recent discoveries and experiments. Herbal culture is growing throughout the United States.

Everybody knows about Chinese opium and the misery it has wrought. It was war and warlords which forced the use of opium on the world and killed or debauched millions. It is war which threatens to take away the curative herbs which has saved or relieved other millions.

When Japan seized Jehol from the old bandit, Marshal Chang, it took good care to save and expand his vast opium trade. It shot any Japanese caught dealing in opium at home, but fanned up the business elsewhere, all over the world. The war juggernaut, rolling on into Asia, didn't touch opium, but it rolls right over the life-saving ma huang.

War is superlatively evil, infinitely cruel, totally blind, in its single fealty to Death. The brooding East, where grow the ma huang and the poppies, has an age-old saying: "The turn of the wheel is the whole of the law." War could not be other than it is—the whole of its law.

Seventy-five-year-old Daniel M. Casey, the Casey who struck out, visited New York a few days ago. It was the San Francisco Examiner which first published "Casey at the Bat," before De Wolf Hopper put both Casey and the ballad into enduring American folk lore.

The poem was written by Ernest L. Thayer, young Harvard graduate, son of a Massachusetts textile manufacturer, then contributing a weekly poem to the Examiner. That was in 1888, a year after Casey had made his historic whiff, not in Mudville but in Philadelphia, playing against the New York Giants. Mr. Thayer, retired, lives at Santa Barbara, Cal.

And here's another one. It was the San Francisco Examiner which first published Edwin Markham's "Man with the Hoe," in 1899. The Oakland correspondent tossed a manuscript on the city desk.

"A school teacher pulled this at a party," he said. "The folks there thought it was good. If you can throw it in as a filler in some bulldog edition, so I can get a few copies, it will make quite a few friends for us."

The make-up man saw something about a "hoe" in the "slug" and put it on the garden page. Bailey Millard, alert editor of one of the eastern Hearst publications, pegged it and flared it around the world. It made the Examiner "many new" friends and piped Edwin Markham up the heights of fame.

The proletariat is one up on the haut monde in the battle of the plays.

The International Ladies Garment Workers' Union puts on "Pins and Needles," in which it socks the rich with everything but the ring post. It blossoms into a hit, and gets so much of the carriage trade that the toilers can't see it.

Miss Elsa Maxwell, party impresario for Newport, Palm Beach and intermediate points, puts on "Who's Who," in which the rich organize a revolt against the "tyranny" of labor. As Variety would say, it is nixed by the critics. The union gals win over the debs.

One or two things stand out here: one is that the garment workers spotted themes as well as the "class enemy," and that helped their play to get over. The other was that the wicked capitalistic papers gave the wage slaves a hand when they pulled something good, and turned thumbs down on their little pal, Elsa, when they thought her play was not so good.

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, March 22.

SENATOR WHEELER emerges from the Senate's battle to save Congress from becoming the puppet of the Presidency, with his 1940 campaign prospects immensely enhanced.

When the Administration set out, by the exertion of every ounce of persuasive effort, to prevent the adoption of the "Wheeler Amendment" to the Executive Reorganization Bill, because it fears an increase in his prestige, that was a compliment rarely paid a foe.

Wheeler in a quiet way is going big as a Democratic prospect two years hence.

He is a liberal with a large progressive following. But he is not a radical.

His offense to the New Deal lies in the fact that he was one of the Democratic Senators who last year balked President Roosevelt of his hope for a packed Supreme Court, to sustain the constitutionality of laws enacted by a rubber stamp Congress.

When he fastened his name to an amendment to the Reorganization Bill, which, if adopted, would have had the effect of balking the President of a major part of the power to reshuffle the whole Executive side of the government, the word went down the line to defeat that amendment at all costs.

On the surface, the idea was to save the Reorganization Bill. Behind scenes the knowing Senators well understood that the White House word was that Wheeler must not be permitted to increase his party leadership prestige at the expense of Mr. Roosevelt.

That made the fight over reorganization, vital enough in itself, a question of major politics.

But it didn't work out that way. It emphasized Wheeler's leadership, his independence, and his availability.

The 6-cent excise tax on pork is going to be lost in the Senate Finance Committee room.

It will be thrown as a sop to the Administration when it is asked to swallow the bitter pill of a tax bill designed to save American business from complete collapse, instead of being designed to save the faces of the politicians and the Treasury smart boys, who cooked up the cockeyed taxes which have prolonged the depression.

Mr. Hull is moving Heaven and earth to get the pigs squeal out of his reciprocity way.

But no such pressure for this is being brought to bear as was brought to bear to save the Administration on the Reorganization Bill.

The trading that went on over that bill is said to have needed only a red flag and a big bell to have resembled an auction.

How significant, that the speech of a dead statesman should be relieved to aid the election of a live politician!

The other day Senator Minton placed in the Congressional Record a speech on the House of Representatives delivered by Champ Clark on March 16, 1916, 22 years ago!

Speaker Clark's argument was that a State did well to keep its Representatives in Congress for many years.

And why is it revived now? It is going to be reprinted as a document—so Senate gossip goes—and flooded all over Kentucky, as an argument for keeping Senator Barkley in the Senate.

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

IS INTELLIGENCE effeminate? That extraordinary question has been asked in a "vocabulary survey," by J. M. Steadman, Jr., in "American Speech."

Mr. Steadman lists 194 words which he says are avoided by college students because they sound "sissified." Among those words are "mamma, trousers, dine, cheerio, lovely—and even "whom."

To use slang words, according to Mr. Steadman, is considered "manly," hair-on-your-chest stuff.

This tough pose is all part of the modern fear-psychosis that grips the world today.

Mr. Steadman seems to think that "democracy" has something to do with this degradation of speech. "Democracy," it seems, according to him, drags everything, including speech, down to the lowest levels.

Democracy has nothing to do with it. If college students are ashamed to use good English it is because they are mentally spineless.

Illiteracy and masculinity are not synonyms in any dictionary.

"When Charles the Fifth retired in weariness from the greatest throne in the world [Spain] to the solitude of the monastery at Yuste he occupied his leisure for some weeks in trying to regulate two clocks.

"To think that I attempted to force the reason and conscience of thousands of men into one mould, and I cannot make two clocks agree!"

The above is from Havelock Ellis' book, "The Task of Social Hygiene."

What Charles the Fifth could not do in his day, when uniform thinking was comparatively easy, most of the rulers of the world are trying to do today, when individual modes of thinking and acting have almost become a criterion for the right to live.

All eyes were turned on a red-curtained box above the judges' stand.

When the cigarette disappeared the interior was pitch-dark.

But there was a man there—a very important man.

And as the recent trial of 21 men charged with murder and treason against Soviet Russia progressed the light came up and died out again day by day in that sinister red-draped box.

In that cubicle, without a doubt, sat the Lord High Executioner of Russia, Joseph Stalin.
